DRY SURVEY SHOWS WETS USE CAPITAL AS CLEARING HOUSE

Two Largest Propaganda Factors Operate From There -Titles Differ but Objects Same

Both Sell Membership at $1 a Head, One Employing Trained Salesmen at Generous Salaries

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, Oct. 23-A survey of the Nation shows that the two master organizations dealing in liquor propaganda—the mightlest weapon of the wets—center their activities in Washington, the capital of the United States. One is called The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the other The Rational League of America. The first claims a membership of 400,000, the latter 150,000. The activities of two are well known ship of 400,000, the latter 150,000. The activities of two are well known.

Both organizations have reached out into many states, and both, according to their secretaries, are growing rapidly. Of the 44 wet organizations that have been listed from time to time over the country, some reaching a number of states, others purely and a number of states, others purely local, these two are the largest and most representative. The others would like to do what the association and league are doing. Friends of enforcement can find from them how the wet attack is centrally directed, how liquor funds nationally collected are administered, and how the forces and indirection are mobilized so that of nullification are mobilized so that arguments of one may be the argu-ments of all.

The Association Against the Pro-hibition Amendment has called a na-tional wet convention of its delegates tional wet convention of its delegates in Washington the first week of November. Meeting will be open to the public. Preparations for the liquor rally are being rushed at the Washington office. It is one of the first times "the wets have dared to come dut in the open." This week," however, as G. C. Hinckley, national secretary and treasurer says, "we are letting the prohibitionists, with their Citizenship Conference, have the stage; after that we shall begin to play our part." The head of the association is Capt. William H. Stayton, who makes his home in wet Baltimore. He was formerly in the American Navy.

America League is illuminating.

R. W. Hunsche, secretary of the latter, who asserts his group is the "largest national organization with a straight modification program," is careful to explain that he league makes no attack on the Constitution. "We differ from the association in letting the Constitution alone," he declares.

The league, Mr. Hunsche says, is eager to have the Volstead Act changed. It centers its ostensible altack upon that Isw and works in an appeal for "lower taxes." While "not attacking the Constitution," it would redefine the word "intoxicating" in the Constitution against the Prohibition Amendment is working to the second of the league, the distinctive character of its program, and the Ray and helpful part in our public like," began its sessions in Founders Hall, Wellesley College, today. The constructive purpose of the league, its desired for "lower taxes." While "not attacking the Constitution," it would redefine the word "intoxicating" in the Constitution against the Prohibition chief difference. Constitution so as to return beer and wine. This is precisely what the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is working for, so the chief difference between them, the drys say, simmers down to the fact that one dares to admit its real objective while the other doesn't.

Quoting the league secretary, Mr. Hunsehe, again, he sas, "a great number of those we approach for our $1 annual dues would refuse to have anything to do with a group attacking the Eighteenth Amendment. We don't believe the people of the Nation want lieve the people of the Nation want the Eighteenth Amendment attacked. We will not support a movement with that as its object." He finds, however, plenty who will agree to its indirect

"Furthermore, the league doesn't be-lieve in the return of hard liquor," the

"Does the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment believe in that?" he was asked.

"You can use your own judgment from their pamphlets as to that," said Mr. Hunsehe. "I think the association has been coming over to our view of attacks on the Constitution for a year. (Continued on Page 3) Column 3)

At Aix-la-Chapelle they were se-verely beaten up by the trades union-ists and then ejected from the public buildings which they had been hold-ing since midnight Saturday.

The colors of the Rhineland Republic were hoisted during the night on the German government building at Wiesbaden by a band of the followers of Dr. Hans A. Dorten, leader of the previous Rhineland Republic move-ment, whose home is in Wiesbaden, a special dispatch from that city states.

Officials of the Federal Government will leave for the occupied area shortly for the purpose of conferring with the Rhineland leaders.

The situation in the Rhineland was discussed by the Cabinet last night, but no definite action was voted, as the Government still believes the Rhineland populace will succeed in defeating the plans of the secessionists.

LONDON, Oct. 23—A Berlin message to the Central News this afternoon says: "A telegram from Aix-la-Cha-pelle says the police succeeded, this morning, in expelling the Republicans from the town and regaining complete mastery of the situation. It is not known if any casualties occurred."

the Republicans from Muenchen Gladbach. It is reported the workers roughly handled the invaders. The Germans have free rein in the town, the dispatch adds, the Belgian troops so far not having interfered. Bavaria Constitutes Itself as the Protector of Germanism

By Special Cable

BERLIN, Oct. 23—Following the proclamation of a Rhinish Republic in Aix-la-Chapelle, similar attempts have been made in several other Rhineland towns, according to reports received here. But the Government as well as the press in unoccupied Germany appear to be most eager to minimize the importance of these disturbances. The Münchener Zeitung—one of the organs expressing Dr. Gustav von Kahr's views—says with regard to this: "The fight is waged for Germaniem excellent non-Germaniem for naism against non-Germanism, for nationalism against internationalism.
Once and for all an end must be made by that body"—an attitude which once more increases the strain between Munich and Berlin. It is becoming nore and more apparent that Dr. von Kahr is determined to wage this fight between Bavaria and the Reich to its very end. The Bavarian Government firmly believes that it is the protector of true Germanism.

The Bavarian Government in the

In the meantime the Government is daily sending Reichswehr detachments into Saxony. Officially it is said that this is done to suppress the unrest in that country—unrest of which little has been heard of here. Until now about 75 per cent of the total Reichswehr outside Bavaria has been assembled in Saxony. A politician here who is in close touch with the Minister of the Interior Affairs pointed out to The Christian Science Monitor repre-sentative that the concentration of the Reichswehr in Saxony could "easily be brought into connection with which, according to the legation, is doomed to certain check.

More importance, however, than to the Rhenish and Bavarian question, even more importance than to the threatening unrest in the Ruhr dis-trict, where unemployment is increas-ing by leaps and bounds, is attached here to the food situation. In consequence of this, everybody tried to buy bread at the cheaper price, and in a short time no more loaves were to be had in the Berlin bakeries, with the result that the people are now forming queues for bread, just as they are forming queues for lard and potatoes. The lack of bread is greatly exciting the masses, for, after lard and potatoes had become scarce and meat too ex-pensive to buy, it had formed, in many instances, the main food for their daily meals.

From other sources, however, one receives the impression that this sedition cannot be lightly dismissed. A military attempt in favor of General Metaxas is not surprising, for during the past month there have been many symptoms that General Metaxas was undermining the popularity of the present Government.

present Government.

General Metaxas was from 1914 to 1917 the man regarded as most hos-tile to the Entente in the entourage of King Constantine; at the begin-ning a partisan of neutrality, but ac-cused in the end of advising the King to declare openly against the Allies. He recommended himself to some pop-ular favor during the days of Con-stantine in commencing against. welcome.

The revolutionaries of September, last year, had no clear policy. Eleutherios Venizelos agreed, with some reluctance, to serve his country after the debacle at Lausanne, but, unfortunately, there have been many signs that all is not going well in Greece under the present régime. The French consider that in dethroning Constantine to replace him by George II, a King even more Germanophile was placed on the throne:

Demands for Elections

There are incessant demands for elections, so that the country may be properly consulted. One has every sympathy with the difficulties of the present Government, which has been treated in a disappointing fashion by the Allies. It is declared here that King George is supporting General Metaxas. It is advisable to understand the charges made against the revolutionary government, even in circles most favorable to Greece. The trial and execution of the ministers held to be responsible for the defeat at the hands of the Turks has most unfavorably impressed western Euro-pean opinion. The censorship and martial law arouse criticism here and discontent among the people. The elections are now fixed, it is unde stood, for December, but many things may happen before that date.

Strict Censorship in Effect

By Cable from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Oct. 23-A counter-revolution, under the leadership of Gen. Jean Metaxas, head of the Metaxist or Royalist Party, has broken out in Greece. The strict censorship immediately re-established by the existing revolutionary Government renders it difficult to sum up the situation from the Athens end, while the capital itself can only possess fragmentary information concerning the developments.

What is known to have happened is that the garrisons of five Greek towns, as far apart as Patras and Chaikis, have joined the insurgent demand for immediate dissolution of the Revolutionary Government and the forma-tion of an administrative Ministry during the holding of elections. main force of the insurgents is con-centrated at the Peloponesus, which was always a royalist political stronghold, and the headquarters of the movement appear to be at Corinth.

Education's Costs Exaggerated 1 The cost of education is not so heavy as some taxpayers would have us beeve. In 1926, only 12 cents out of every dollar spent for public purposes went for maintenance of elementary and high schools. Again, the total school expenditures, throughout the United States in 1920 were $1,036,000,000, but we spent $1,000,000,000 for candy... $750,000,000 for perfumery and cos-metics, $800,000,000 for theater admis-sions. Thus it will be seen that the cost of public schools is not compara-tively large.

The public school is the hope of America. It is the great institution for instilling into the rising generation and the aliens the fundamentals upon which this country was founded,—liberty of thought and action, equality of opportunity, complete senaration of church tunity, complete separation of church and state, and protection of property and there need be no fear of Bolshevism in America, because our Nation is founded upon the highest ideals.

We should be particularly active in educating the immigrants to our system of government. We cannot blame the aliens for living in groups and faling to assimilate, if we neglect to provide the facilities for them to learn our ways. When they have learned our ways they will not be likely to give attention to radicalism. Let the Nation combat Bolshevism, superstition and unsound doctrines with better public schools, emphasizing Americanism.

league), because she believes that it expresses an awakening sense of re-sponsibility on the part of the col-leges to the importance of civic edu-cation for women voters. She declared:

The league, in addition to functioning as a school for its members through the distribution of thousands of citizenship primers on local, national, and international topics, and its Speaker's Bureau, believes that a no less important aspect of its work has been to a rouse the woman's college to a realization of its responsibility to the practical problems of community life and citizenship, a responsibility strangely enough, which seemed slow to take root in the academic soil. The invitation from Wellesley, together with an invitation to fold a school on foreign affairs at Radcliffe in January, marks a triumph for the organization, whose guiding purpose has been to sell the idea of training for citizenship to the general public.

Legislation Obtained

In local politics the League has been responsible for three pieces of legislation. The first, making women eligible to all public offices in the State, county, city and town, both elective and appointive; secondly, for giving equal guardianship for mothers over minor children; and thirdly, making it possible for women to vote where they actually reside, when living apart from their husbands.

heir husbands. In addition to its general program of In addition to its general program of education in government and politics and "the creation and maintenance of standards for forms and activities of government," the league has undertaken a specific program of an unpartisan character with regard to national and international politics. In national politics it will attempt to bring home the urgent need of a federal amendment to abolish child labor, in the United States, and in its registration campaign it will bend every effort toward getting out at the election of 1924 75 per cent of the eligible voters. This would be an increase of 25 per cent over the presidential campaign of 1920.

In the field of international politics its program is threefold. "(1) Continuous campaign for the outlawry of war. (2) Entrance into the Permanent Court of International Justice. (3) Association with other nations for the maintenance of abiding peace."

The present School of Local Government and Politics is being conducted under the direct supervision of the departments of history, economics and sociology at Wellesley College. Classes have been dismissed by the professors who are conducting co ences and giving lectures, and the students have been urged to enroll in the league school.

The Financial Side

The financial control of the Rational League is centralized, that of the association distributed among the state branches. The dues of each are a dol-lar a year. The former has organizers out now in Wyoming and Indiana, while the latter is drumming up trade in Colerado, and will shortly reopen its former offices in Ohio. The methds of the two in canvassing are very different.

The league puts its affairs in the hands of trained salesmen and makes a regular business campaign of it. If a salesman cannot bring the national treasury a certain number of dollars a week, he is promptly fired. The salesmen get $40 or $50 a week and are good talkers. If what the secresays is true about their success the league, which so far as its pros pectus goes, appears to consist of three men, must be a good invest-

So far, the league has made no active use of its petitions or memb ship. Its two national officers, R. W. White and E. Earnest Woollen, assert they get no recompense for their work.
"Contributing members" who have paid their dues are not approache again, but this January the league magazine will be revived to give opportunity, it would appear, to garner another crop of silver coins in exchange for its monthly numbers.

The league, incorporated in the Dis trict of Columbia, offers the following

On the other hand a number of the state leaders whom the correspondent has met, refuse to make any comment on that phase of their propaganda, declaring they only want a new "interpretation of the amendment-not its defeat."

say American cities should be Quebecs. Here liquor is sold under "government control." What this really means is explained by B. H. Spence of the Dominion Alliance. In a recent article he states that liquor sales from Government dispensaries for the year ending April, 1922, in Quebec Province totaled $15,000,000, that brewers received for beer sold to licensed houses $15,500,000 (sold to the consumer at 50 per cent more). "If we add to this the amount paid for liquor imported, a conservative estimate of the liquor bill of the Province would be over $40,000,000, which is more than it was in the palmiest days of license," says Mr. Spence.

It is for this end that the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is working. "Down with the ment is working. "Down with the saloon!" they cry, "but let us have more liquor than ever."

WARLESS WORLD RESOLUTION PASSED BY CONGREGATIONALISTS

Peace Rather Than Pacificism Expressed in Final Form, Says Dr. W. E. Barton, Former Moderator

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 23 (Special)—Following the prolonged and at times tense discussion last night of a resolution for a wariess world, the National Council of Congregational Churches gave way today to the annual session of the American Missionary Association, which devoted its attention this morning to the hearing of reports and the consideration of a number of problems.

There was only one dissenting voice to the form of the resolution for world peace as it was finally adopted by the Council and it embodies substantially to the form of the resolution to work of the peace as it was finally adopted by the Council and it embodies substantially the statement of international ideals adopted by the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches on Dec. 31, 1931, with some amplification to meet the views of a group headed by the Rev. Roy Chamberlain of Han-

Discussion of this issue started in the afternoon and was renewed in the evening. Debate was begun with the advocacy by Mr. Chamberlin of a statement declaring that "The council believes there is a special obligation on the churches of Christ to prepare for peace, and inasmuch as war is wrong, to an unwillingness to partici-pate in it." This encountered objec-tions by Judge John Peckham and others, on the ground that it would be others, on the ground that it construed as opposition to the draft in a national war emergency. This opposition was largely overcome in the course of debate and committee de-liberations, in which the Chamberlain roup participated.

League of Nations Indorsed

The council also passed resolutions advocating America's entrance into the League of Nations, declaring for unhibition enforcement and condemning organizations elike the Ku Klux Klan, without mentioning that organization directly.

The warless world resolution says:

Believing that war as a method f settling international disputes or of settling international disputes or achieving national aspirations is both unnecessary and anti-Christian, the council reaffirms its faith that Christ's way of thought and life is sufficient to overcome the cause of war and lead the Nation into a life of co-operative peace. The council also believes that there is a special obligation upon the church of Christ to organize and prepare for peace, to engage at once with all its power in a campaign of education against war as a method, and in favor of other methods of settling disputes, to diminish among peoples the disposition to resort to force, to bring the people to the conviction that war is wrong, and to develop the will for peace.

The Rev. Dr. William E. Barton, Oak Park, Ill., former moderator of the national council and chairman of this statement today to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor concerning the resolutions adopted relative to war, the League of Nations, and the World Court;

relative to war, the League of Nations, and the World Court:

The committee on resolutions received a large number of resolutions on these various matters, and in the first report presented resolutions which they deemed most likely to express the judgment of the council. These resolutions were not presented in the exact form in which they came to the committee, but they did not originate with the committee resolutions only in the sense that they represented what the committee was able to agree upon as likely to meet the view of the council.

These resolutions only in the sense that they represented what the committee was able to agree upon as likely to meet the view of the council.

These resolutions were not sufficiently emphatic to commend themselves to certain of the younger ministers, a number of whom had served bravely overseas, either in the trenches or in religious or welfare work. The Rev. Roy B. Chamberlin of Hanover, N. H., acted as spokesman for a considerable group of these men, and presented substitute resolutions, which were referred back to the committee accepted a considerable part of the Chamberlin substitute, and agreed that Mr. Chamberlin should have the floor to present an amendment which the committee did not see its way to incorlittee did not see its way to incor-to present an amendment which the committee did not see its way to incorporate in the report.

In the final hearing the Chamberlin Amendment, which opposed all curtailment of free speech in the time of war, and was thought to contain an implied censure of the courts, was voted dows, and the committee's report was adopted. This report was stronger than the first report of the committee and, like that report, was unqualified in its denunciation of war as a means of settling international disputes. It was, however, a resolution in favor of peace, rather than pacificism.

In its final amended form it was adopted by the council with very few negative votes, and it represents, I think, the united government of the delegates of the churches as nearly as that can be formulated in a resolution of this character.

The report as adopted incorporated the 10 propositions of the Federal Council's report on peace, and is thus in entire harmony with the resolutions which have been passed by other religious bodies, but the resolution goes beyond these.

A resolution in favor of prohibition enforcement was adopted and reads as

Resolved. That we heartily thank the Congregational Union of England and Wales for their cordial expression of interest in our temperance issue.
The Eighteenth Amendment to our Constitution was passed after long years of temperance agitation by an almost unanimous vote of the separate states. The general sentiment in favor of its strict enforcement, is steadily growing.
We look forward with confidence to its more complete senforcement, and to the time when the other nations of the world shall take their stand by our side for the cause of sobriety and righteousness.

A resolution, framed with much deliberation and care, declaring for higher standards of justice and better economic adjustments in respect to industrial and farm problems and the part sustained by labor unions, was adopted. It reads:

adopted. It reads:

For Labor this means the right to organize, to increasingly determine the conditions under which it will labor; and the objectives of Labor's common activity. It means progressive achievement in the attaining of (a) a living wage, (b) proper hours and conditions of living. (c) security against unemployment (d) a share in the control of industry, (e) a share and portion in the profits.

On the side of the duties it means:

the profits.

On the side of the duties it means:

(a) The skillful performing of necessary work, which shall be signdardized as to quality as well as quantity; (b) that laboring men and their organization shall consider 'the total welfare of industry and seek that inclusive justice which includes the welfare of all parties to the industrial process.

For the farmer this will mean a larger power of self-determination in the ownership and control of his property and in the marketing of his products. At present the farmer buys and sells in a market very largely controlled by middlemen and consumers. There must be a growth of the great producers' co-operatives, which make possible the efficient marketing of the products of the farm and which give to the farmer a real autonomy in the industrial world.

On the side of the farmer's duties this will mean: (a) A careful stewardship of the soil through intelligent and efficient farming: (b) ecohomic marketing of useful goods; (c) and intelligent citizenship; (d) a conscientious exer-cient farming; (b) economic marketing of useful goods; (c) and intelligent citizenship; (d) a conscientious exer-cise of the duties of parenthood; (e) a distinctive contribution to a national conscience and a national culture.

In another resolution condemning caste, racial and religious hatred, the council urged Congress to pass the Dyer anti-lynching bill. No stand was taken either for or against funda-mentalism. It was held that the church has room for both liberals and conservatives,

A limpet will cling to a tidewater rock so tenaciously that it can be removed only by physical violence: often its shell will be crushed before its hold can be loosened. Such, in effect, is the definition william Ferdyce finds in the dictionary, once he has pitched upon a word to characterize the objectionable Sheepwell whom he finds stuck in his brother's house, an unwelcome but seemingly permanent guest. The brother, Mr. Devson, was under some obligation to Sheepwell having been rescued by him from drowning. Mrs. Devson, in a natural glow of gratitude, invited Sheepwell 'for the remainder of his holiday" to the Devson's country place. He came for a fortnight and had stayed two months by the time the play begins, blandly unconscious of the misery he causes his host' and hostess and their son Dick.

Sheepwell is a common person, with-

Probably he had no notion that he was presuming outrageously upon his hosts; instinctively he seemed to take it for granted that anything he desired to happen, others desire also. While the Devsons took to Daphne at once, and Dick was obviously smitten at first sight, her coming promised to fasten. Sheepwell upon them even more firmly. He was impervious to hints, and they were too polite and grateful to turn him out.

All this is set forth in the first of the three acts. The rest of the play concerns the efforts to get rid of Sheepwell. Daphne refuses to marry Dick, because, while knowing that he is "difficult," she is loyal to him. It is Fordyee who, after various ineffectual family maneuvers which include an heroic visit to London during the hot spell, engineers the removal of the limpet. As he is one of the toughest specimens of his kind, his shell indeed has to be penetrated rather brutally before he would let go.

The limpet provides Mr. Huntley with a rôle full of hearty humor, and he plays him to the hilt. It is a part nothing like the silly British fops which he has mortly played in America, and yet is clearly differentiated from that other famous nuisance. Eccles, which he played in "Caste" two weeks ago at the Copley. His comedy style is remarkable for its continuity of effect, like Cyril Maude's, and its esse and resourcefulness.

like Cyril Maude's, and its essenand resourcefulness.

Miss Wilson gives a brilliant performance of Mrs. Devson, who is made out to be an effervescent ninny by the authors. The actress managed to be human in the part, and at times fier characterization attained the quality of high comedy in an action that was usually polite farce. Mr. Clive, as the correct butler, who was mortally annoyed because Sheepwell would not keep his place among the gentlemen of the household, gives another of his deeply considered performances. His work attains to that uncommon quality of revealing the inner nature of the pervealing the inner nature of the pertains to that uncommon quality of re-vealing the inner nature of the per-son he is acting. Miss Standing's sen-sitiveness in response continually serves the story values, and Mr. Tongue gives ardor and conviction to the rôle of plick. A difficult exterior scene is handsomely set.

Sheepwell is a common person, without breeding yet not precisely vulgar. He has a wretched taste in humor, running mostly to bad puns, and is vastly satisfied with himself. In fact, he is sure that the Devaons' house would be desolate without his cheering presence. Sheepwell even takes it upon himself to invite his daughter, Daphne, who is altogether likable, to join the party. Probably he had no notion that he was presuming outrageously upon his hosts;

Hannibal Ben Linn "Caroline," which began its engagement in the Majestic Theater last night, is difficult to classify. It is called an operetta, but it never rises to the grandeur of that stage, yet it is hardly musical comedy, for there it lacks the dash essential to a performance of this kind. "Caroline" then is simply a well-written story set to music and embellished with lyrics that are clever, sentimental, and romantic. It is an adaptation, but that counts for little. How it is produced is the question of the moment.

The scene is laid in the garden of the old Calhoun home in Virginia and the period is just after the Civil War. General Calhoun is burdened with the care of a stepdaughter Caroline, who is the ever-constant companion of his daughter Helen. Caroline has carried on a clandestine correspondence with a boy of her early years. Roderick Gray, whose good looks took her fancy. The general commands her to break the attachment and to marry Capt. Robert Langdon, whose return from the war is expected at any moment.

Changed after years of hardship, Captain Langdon comes back with sunbrowned countenance to the estate, but masquerades as a hunted prisoner of war, seeking refuge. He falls in love with Caroline, but she still cries for her Roderick. Suddenly, Roderick returns, so dejected and unmanly in appearance that Caroline spurns his love and turns to her new suitor, who proves to be the youth she disliked, grown out of his freckles and snub nose.

Caroline as played by Myrtle Schaaf is a lovable girl, with a somewhat shrill soprano voice of good volume. Helen, vivacious and almost reckless, is entertaining in the hands of Dorothy Maynard. Captain Langdon is a soldierly character, with a firm resonant voice as portrayed by J. Harold Murray, and

ALL-NEW ENGLAND TRIP IS PROPOSED

Success of Maine Coast-to-Coast Tour Starts Movement

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 23 (Special) Another coast-to-coast trip is in ville prospect for the State of Maine, Doro similar to the successful one which was run in September. An all-New England coast-to-coast special is also a possibility.

Philip W. Blake, manager of the Mass. September trip, has had so many in-quiries and letters with regard to a repetition that he is already deep in repetition that he is already deep in preliminary plans for a winter trip by the southern route. Many of the people who want to the Pacific coast in September have signified their intentions of again enrolling if another trip is arranged, and have also suggested that a combination of the Canadian and southern routes with San Diego. Cal., as the objective, might be agreeable. In event of such a trip some of the return stopping places would be Dallas, San Antonio and Houston, a., and At-

Tex.; New Orleans, La., and Atlanta, Ga.

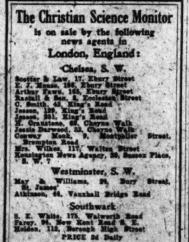

The advisability of having New England-wide trips is also being investigated by Mr. Blake, two of these to take place next year, one in May and one in September. It is easily possible to so vary the route of the coast-to-coast trips that the journey may be repeated four times said Mr. may be repeated four times, said Mr. Blake, before there is evident over-lapping on the routes, and all through

In the event of the staging of New England-wide trips the purpose would be the same as that which was so successfully carried out on the recent Maine trip; namely, to demonstrate that some of the western states, while larger that the New England states have less in the way of natural resources to recommend them, but have prospered simply because of a high degreee of co-operation among their citizenry.

In the staging alone are there signs In the staging alone are there signs of artistic freshness and strength. It is the work of Richard Boleslawsky of the Moscow Art Theater and forms one of the earliest examples of the effect of the visiting Russians on the American theater. A vigorous beauty is achieved for the play by the harmonious use of brilliant colors and gold and silver. It is perhaps less bizarre and more sumptuous than one would expect. One who knows little would expect. One who knows little of the reign of Philip II of Spain, the period in which the action takes place, will surely find it the world of Velas-tensified and gold and silver highly burnished.

Mr. Skinner has in Sancho Panza one of those parts in which he has endeared himself to the American public. The jovial goatherd is told by his master, the Knight, that he shall be Governor of an island, and it chances that in his wanderings Sancho Panza, led by the smell of a great pudding, enters the pavilion of the Duke of Barataria, just at the moment when the duke is in sore need of an honest Governor for his rebellious city. The fortunes that follow the peasant and his goat Dapple at court are fitted, partly for extravaganza, partly for comic opera and partly for romantic drama.

The motif of the play, therefore, is the effect that this discovery has upon the different characters when they begin to settle down after the initial shock of their awakening. As a matter of fact nothing particular has happened to any one of them; but they all reach their final destination. And they ask Scrubby which that is to be, heaven, or the other, place. "Scrubby" explains that it may be either or both. It all depends upon the play, therefore, is noted to select the initial shock of their awakening. "Outward Bound" could not exactly be described as a play, even less, per-haps, as an entertainment. Possibly the best description would be an ex-tremely interesting, and at times, even, enthralling speculative narra-tive in dialogue form.

There is a curious absence of crew on board the ship, the only member of that staff being a rather strange-looking old steward, by name Scrubby. Well, they reach the harbor, and the redoubtable examiner does come on board. He is nothing more or on board. He is nothing more or less frightening than a great big, good-natured clergyman with a dash of the customs house officer. But he can be terrible in cross-examination. Curiously and perhaps naturally enough, those who tremble most beneath his benevolent gaze are the best characters of the party. But, in genuine humility they are not quite sure of themselves. Each of them is in for a most pleasant surprise when they go ashore, and find themselves if not exactly in heaven, in some place very like it.

But the worst of them, a man and

By the Way

THERE is at last a prospect that Shakespeare will have a perma-nent home in London, other than their wise heads over Ibsen's plays, regretful that they cannot conscientiously call the Norwegian master, a great artist. These people rarely define what they mean by didactism. It is so easy to pigeonhole, label and dismiss, with "high-brow" finality. Most of Galsworthy's early plays have a very definite problem to state, and if possible, solve. But not so this extravagant play as he calls "Foundations." Yet underneath the delightfully fantastic episodes, it is possible to discern a deeper meaning. Mr. Lemmy, a plumber's assistant, a revolutionary spark, tells his protaging different from the afternoon one; and the first two selections are "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Twelfth Night."

Announcement of the presentation of Drinkwater's "Robert E. Lee" in New York shortly has revived interest in "A Man Named Grant," a drama by Edward E. Rose that has been considered for production by several manaered for production by several managers. Those who have read the manuscript believe that it will bring renewed recognition of Mr. Rose's best talents, just what "Icebound" and "Detour" have done for Owen Davis. Mr. Bose wrote the play for Albert Phillips, after seeing his vivid characterization of Grant in Drinkwater's drama. On hearing about the two plays, J. B. Trainer, chairman of the memorial committee, G. A. R. said: memorial committee, G. A. R., said:

He, like many others, has been awaiting announcement of the production of Mr. Rose's play. There would surely be great interest in their performance simultaneously in New York.

The company do not appear in theaters, but in town halls, public libraries, and mechanics' institutes, and concentrate their efforts on presenting good plays and good acting rather than on lavish scenery and dresses. The program to be offered between new and Christmas includes the works of Arnold Bennett, Ibsen, Shakespeare, and Shaw; and the prices of admission are very moderate.

"Scaramouche," the romantic play which Charles L. Wagner is presenting with Sidney Blackmer in the title rôle, opens at the Morosco Theater. Oct. 24. The Selwyns in association with Adolph Klauber will present Jane Cowlin New York soon in a repertoire of classic drama including "Antony and Cleopatra," Maeterlinck's "Pelleas and Melisande," "Tweifth Night" and "Romeo and Juliet."

Helen Hayes will "appear in "Loney Lee," a comedy by Sophie Treadwell, in Stamford, Conn. Nov. 3. Stark Young is directing the Theater Guild's production of "Fallures." in which Ben-Ami will be seen.

Classic Loftus will reappear on the New York stage at the Palace on Nov. 12.

The first performance in the newly reconstructed and rejuvenated Hippodrome, now B. F. Keith's New York Hippodrome, will occur in Thanksgiving week.

Beryl Mercer has been chosen by Hard Sidney and Christmas includes the works of Arnold Bennett, Ibsen, Shakespeare, and Shaw; and the prices of Admission are very moderate.

Where the theatrical world of Longton is concerned, November Promises to be full of activities. Barrie's "The Little Minister" is to have another revival, this time at the Queen's Theater to the Apollo. An American drama, "The Last Warning," is to be presented at the Comedy in November.

A new play by John Galsworthy is outlined for production at the St. Martin's Theater, London. At the Ambassadors' Theater the next piece will be Miss Clemence Dane's "The Way Things Happen."

nary study in contrasts. It disclosed in a number of passages a victorious mood, as though possibly designed, when first put to paper 10 years ago, to be used as a seng of conquest; yet it gave expression in numerous descriptive pages to a feeling of hesitancy and even of moroseness, as if the original purpose had been modified to guit altered conditions in the outer world. But in any case, it turned out to be normal music, communicating its message in the accepted idiom of the German school and giving listeners, with its_shifting moods of cestasy and meditativeness, a desirable variety of impressions.

The occasion brought the Society of Friends of Music back to the attention of the public as a group of per-sons devoted to modern as well as ancient causes; and more than that, restored the society's committee to recognition as a body that can do first-rate things in a first-class way. No choral concert of great magnitude has gone off in so clean fashion here has gone off in so clean tasmon nere in a long time as this one went. Every detail was well rehearsed, with the result that an excellent production, worthy of the town's ample resources and becoming its reputation for artistic prowess, was put on record. Choir Brilliant

The quartet of soloists -- Mme. Elisabeth Rethberg, Mme. Charles Cahier, Orville Harrold and Paul Bender could hardly have shown to better advantage had the seprano, contracto, tenor and bass rôles been actually written for their voices. The 200 singers who comprised the choir personned brilliantly, in consequence largely, no doubt, of the training singers who comprised the choir performed brilliantly, in consequence largely, no doubt, of the training given them by the chorus-master.
Stephen Townsend. And quite as important, the orchestra of Metropolitan Opera musicians executed their task with an enthusiasm that indicated with an enthusiasm that indicated pleasure in the fresh fields they were exploring. To add that Mr. Bodanzky distinguished himself, is perhaps only to say the whole thing over again; for after all, his generalship may be regarded as but a co-ordination of the labors in the way of solo study, choir labors in the way of solo study, choir fractice and orchestral drill that the ank and file have been carrying on fince last spring.

Concerning Pfitzner's scoring, word may be noted. The instrumental accompaniment of "Von Deutscher Seele" is full of color and sonority; but for all that, it never outglamours or overdies the choral singing. Ex-cept in the closing pean of victory, the four voice parts can practically always be heard above the orchestra. Concerning general matters, the work may almost be regarded as a choral symphony, inasmuch as it contains a number of interfudes for orchestra which have an organic share in the composer's plan. Of especial beauty is the evening, night, and morning episode, which amounts to a sym-phonic slow movement, in the first of the two divisions of the cantata. Of the two divisions of the cantata. Of rather mystic quality is the episode entitled "Resignation," abounding in experiments for aspiring tone color-ists to study, in the second division.

A San Carlo Experiment

The San Carlo Grand Opera Company presented "Madam Butterfly" on the afternoon of Oct. 18, with a non-Japanese soprano in the title rôle. The return to the sort of cast usual with other companies struck me as a good idea, because it argued that illusion does not depend on realism. Nothing happened to change my regard for Mme. Miura, the artist who had hitherto been impersonating the heroine of the piece. Quite the contrary, I was more convinced of her vocal and histrionic ability than ever. What occurred to me rather was that she ought to be given a chance in other operas besides this one by Puccini, the scene of which chances to be laid in her native land.

Rudolph Ganz, the pianist, appeared in Eolian Hall on the afternoon of Oct. 18, and I heard him in the greater part of his program, including works by Brahms, Schumann. Ganz, Blanchet, Casella and Debussy, Mr. Ganz is scarcely to be counted other companies struck me as a good

Air. Ganz is scarcely to be counted among entertaining players, but he surely belong in the class of instructive ones, especially if the subject-matter of his program happens to be the music of the old romantic school.

ANS PFITZNER'S cantata, "Von Deutscher Seele," words by Elchendorff, performed for the first time in the United States at Carnegie Hall, evening of Oct. 15, under the auspices of the Society of the Friends of Lusic, proved to be an extraordinary study in contrasts. It disclosed for a number of passages a victorious

By conviction, Mr. Ganz is deubtless as modern as anybody else, but by schooling I am very sure he is altogether of the nineteenth century. Comsequently, I take less pleasure in hearing him in a quizzical composition, like "In modo esotico," by Casella. or a grotesque one, like "Fireworks," by Debussy, than in an earnest, impassioned works such as the Fsharp minor sonata of Schumann.

Mr. Patton's Recital At the Town Hall on the evening of Oct. 18, I heard a few songs interpreted by Fred Patton, baritone, with Charles Albert Baker playing the plane. Many times I have attended concerts of singing societies in which Mr. Patton took part as assisting artist, but I do not recall having been a listener at one of his rectinis before. English is the language, if I remember. a listener at one of his recitals before. English is the language, if I remember correctly, in which I have always heard him as soloist in oratorio and cantata; and English, again, was the language in which I heard him this time. There were selections on his program from the Italian and German repertories, which I missed; but I question not they were well presented. Anericans who sing in their own language with good effect can as a rule be trusted in other languages. If they begin by mastering English singing, they begin, I am convinced at the hard end. The pièces in which at the hard end. The pieces in which, I had the pleasant opportunity of studying this vocalist's resonant tone studying this vocalist's resonant tone and noble style were by MacDowell, Bantock, Farley, German, and Hadley. Speaking of English, I went to the Century Theater on the afternoon of Oct. 20, to hear the San Carlo Opera Company sing Wolf-Ferrar's "Secret of Susanae" in a vernacular translation. Were I to sum up my conclusions about opera in English, I should say that no argument against it on theoretical and academic grounds is worth heeding. At the same time, I parading in clothes too big for him. Do the best I can to be sympathetic, he cuts the figure, to me, of a boy in his father's hat and coat. The San Carlo "Secret of Suzanne" illustrated the matter anew for me. The performance, nevertheless, was admirable musically, and my only real regret was that it was the company's last matinee here for the season.

A New Planist In Carnegie Hall on the afternoon of Oct. 20, I heard Claudio Arrau, a new planist from South America, in three pieces by Debussy and in the 'Don Juan" fahtasy of Liszt. A great delight to me is to bear witness to the arrival of a player of light touch and arrival of a player of light touch and moderate tone. Pounding and noise evidently have no place in Mr. Arrau's musical philosophy. His interpretations may not be so robust as those of hitherto popular planists, but they say a good deal in their unobtrusive way. His execution is brilliant and pliant, too, adapting itself to the requirements of both new and old styles of writing.

the two divisions of the cantata. Of rather mystic quality is the episode entitled "Resignation," abounding in experiments for aspiring tone colorists to study, in the second division.

As for the outward success of the concert, I think that may have come somewhat from a new plan of management which the society has adopted. However it may be, I am glad, for one, to see so high a standard of choral performance set early in the season.

At the Walpole Callestory new medium. It is, perhaps, a faint echo from bygone days when the old masters were conversant with everything from drawing to sculpture. To lay claim to genius, an artist should have a knowledge of craftsmanship which will give him free reign in the exercise of his imagination.

Blampied's water color of an old lady finds no reflection in a print. Gray in color, with delicate undula-tions of tone, it achieves through suggestion the full round weight of heavy masses and the exquisite gentleness of personality.

The student of modern art move-ments will find in Blampied's sketches an opportunity for analytical compari sons. In the pencil preliminary for "The Return of the Fishermen," forms are rounded, details obliterated, and figures reduced to elementals. Action, form, density-these are the object tives, and only that which is the essence of composition survives.

At the American Art Association, following the much-anticipated sale of the masterpiece. The acid test of the masterpiece. The acid test of artistry is, after all, the ability to hold and enhance in the finished work the vigor of the original composition. The completed etching "The Return of the Fishermen" adds delicacy to mass and grace to action. It "moves" with the swift surety of rhythmic line.

Blampied does not hesitate to combine mechanical effects. The sketch for "Tired Laborers" is carried out in ink and pencil, thus placing the emphasis by the difference in medium. His "Vraic Gatherers"—a rich dark mosaic of olive greens and browns with a fleck here and there of black and red, is a union of pastel, water color and crayon.

But to student and artist alike, the comparative study of the etching and the sketch points a single moral-no man can exceed in genius the scope of his craftsmanship

Financing of Digging Results in Stabilized Market and a Higher Tone

CARIBOU, Me., Gct. 23 (Special)

Entering upon the second month of its operation the Maine Potato Growers Exchange reports that the market is stabilized and its tone higher than ever before. Through arrangement with Boston, New York and local banks amounts totaling $200.000 have been placed in the hands of individual growers and this has enabled them for the first time in the history of the industry to finance digging operations and hold their product for a normal movement.

The warehousing and transportation department report excellent progress in systematizing the general plan for handling the movement of 15,000 cars of potatoes.

A survey made by directors of the various districts for the purpose of arranging for warehousing was based on a normal yield. A survey made by directors of the various districts for the purpose of arranging for warehousing was based on a normal yield. Seasonal and climatic conditions have been such that a much larger crop is now in the process of harvesting, than was expected. The warehousing department anticipated such conditions and has obtained 10 per cent additional storage than was indicated as needed by the preliminary warehousing survey.

Arrangements also have been made so that full information is furnished the Federal Fruit and Vagetable Growers. Inc., as to grade, condition and quarity of all carloads to be shipped 48 hours in advance.

The Federaled Fruit and Vegetable Growers continue to give the same distribution service as provided with early shipments. Members of the Maine Potato Growers Exchange are no longer rolling cars to Boston to be dumped with the old.

A certain length of time will be required before all may become adjusted to the new method of doing business. Most excellent co-operation has been evident on the part of business interests who are doing business with members of the exchange.

More than 7690 acres which was under crop mortrage has been assigned. Other interests having obligations have co-operated to the fullest extent with members until distributions might be received from the various pools.

Received Nov. 5

In order to make an early start in the task of registering the nearly 500,000 motor vehicles in Massachusetts, applications for 1924 number pletes will be received at the registry at Commonwealth Pier beginning Nov. 5, Frank A. Goodwin, state registrar of motor vehicles, announced yesterday.

Contrary to the usual plan, no application blanks will be mailed to automobile owners. Each owner, this year, will have to obtain his own blank, either at the State Registry, from local garages or dealers, automobile clubs, motor vehicle inspectors, or from one of the eight branch offices which are to be opened in Worcester. Pittsfield, Lowell, Lynn, Quincy, New Bedford, Fall River, and Lawrence.

One change has been made in the applications this year with the removal of the affidavit. Now the application does not have to be sworn to but merely filled out and mailed to the Registry. With regard to the 5000 low reserved numbers, however, applications will be mailed and requests for them will be received from Oct. 22 to Nov. 10.

Mr. Goodwin, in giving out his Automobiles reflect the personality of the different nation. Take the German cars as an instance. The people themselves are built heavy and move rather slowly. The German motor vehicles are heavy in appearance, with solid streamline bodies, and powerful engines, which have a driving force behind them which seems to dominate. At first glance they seem clumsy in appearance, but when they take the road, the mechanical refinements and easy riding make one forget the unusual appearance of the body construction. In spite of the troubled situation, the German motor vehicles are following fashion lines, which the world must recognize.

In France, motor cars are light and pleasing in appearance. Even though the vehicle may generate 100 horsepower, this in no way detracts from the general air of ease and comfort which distinguishes the French machine in any company. Their body huilders are artists, and give those little intimate touches to their work which distinguishe class from mass. If we wheels are needed to complete which is no way decrease to make the continents eight persons, the question of refinement comes second to practicality. However, that does not mean that Americans do not for low the fashions closely. America lets the continental engineer adopts it with whatever changes are necessary for his particular car. The result is that the motor construction, and changes its coat only when reason dictates the necessity.

The English car is an excellent piece of machinery. It is built carefully in every part so that it stands up wall under the most exacting conditions. But, uplike the American automobile, which is made for a quantity market, the price is out of all reason for the average buyer.

English Cars Small On account of the taxes, which are $2 \text{ 1 per horsepower, the cars are built small and light. This in no way described to complete the provided to the provide

On account of the taxes, which are £1 per horsepower, the cars are built small and light. This in no way detracts from their excellence. In America automobile owners change their models almost as often as they change their clothes in sea-son. In England a car is renewed when the driver feels that the machine is unsafe on the road. There are, of course, many motor vehicles in England which are changed seasonally, but as a general rule, usability determines.

While one Rolls-Royce is in process thousands of Fords have been built, sold and renewed. And the Ford is the car which the majority of English the car which the majority of English cars on the small horsepower rating employed, would have to compete with. While perhaps the British cars have many more refinements, and no doubt are more carefully built than the Ford, the fact remains that the Ford can be bought for almost nothing, and will stand all kinds of abuse without "going under." The asphalt pavement was very smooth, it sloped a little down hill to the garage, and on either side of it were big stones, painted white, so that they would show in the night.

Now, when Johnny leaped into the saddle, he happened to notice one of these stones on one side, a few ahead of him; and when he had been riding several minutes, he was astonished to see that he had caught up with the white stone. And then he discovered that, each time his horse rocked it went a little bit forward; so that, if he kept on rocking long enough, he could go all the way to the garage. It was an interesting discovery.

"My horse can run," said Johnny to Tommy, who lived next door, and was looking at him over the low wall. "You watch me."
"I guess my horse could beat yours," said Tommy.

So Tommy got his rocking horse from the playroom, and dragged it across the yard, and they both together lifted it over the wall and gether lifted it over the wall and stood it beside Johnny's rocking horse. "Giddap!" cried Tommy, springing into his saddle.

"Giddap!" cried Johnny, leaping into his saddle at the same instant. And way they went.

It was a hard, close race. The rocking horses were the same size, and so were their riders. Johnny rocked so hard that his horse almost stood on its wooden head and nearly threw on its wooden head and nearly threw Johany over it. Tommy rocked so hard that his horse reared up on its rocker and nearly fell over backward. "Giddap!" shouted Johnny. "Giddap! Giddap!" shouted Tommy. FINANCIAL SYSTEM IN HAITI IS SOUGHT

Lack of Stability Is Laid to Paucity of Collaboration of Americans and Natives

By GARDNER L. HARDING PORT-AU-PRINCE, Hafti, Sept. 23
"The Government of the United States," said Charles E, Hughes, United States Secretary of State, at United States Secretary of State, at Minneapolis, on Aug. 30, "is seeking to make its relation to Haiti beneficial to the Haitian people; it has no other aim but to establish peace and stability. It does not seek to acquire or to control the territory of Haiti, and it will welcome the day when it can leave Haiti with the reasonable assurance that the Haitinns will be able to maintain an independent government competent to keep order and discharge its international obligations."

obligations."

I am writing from the midst of this "peace and stability"; I admit the peace, but I defy anyone to demonstrate the stability of the actual Haitian aspect of Haiti. Stability cannot be imposed on Haiti from the outside. It must grow up through collaboration and partnership. There is a want of generous collaboration, accompanied by continuous minor atrocities in tact, which makes the very success of American activities in Haiti understandably detestable to many Haitians, and adds point to the often heard assertion that America has accomplished no really constructive complished no really constructive change in Haiti during all the eight years it has been here.

"To aid the Haitian people to free themselves from the hopeless conditions... produced there" is Secretary Hughes' guiding reason for American intervention. Carl Kelsey, after looking over the situation exhaustively in 1921, gave as his final advice to the ink over the situation expansively 1921, gave as his final advice to the American Government, "Get in or get out." The hard thing is that still today Americans are not sufficiently "in" this country to help it achieve the stability promised, and that they have gone just far enough to be obliged still to get in farther before they can think of getting out.

Financial Adviser Awaited After eight years no substantial plan has yet been laid before the Haitian people to increase the revenues of the country. The so-called internal tax law, a project only re-cently drawn up "in the rough" by Mr. John S. Hord, now departed to Ecuador, has never been published. It awaits the arrival of a new financial adviser, an office whose incum-bents have only resided in Haiti for 12 months during the 41/2 years since the beginning of 1919, when John L.

Revenue Collecting Unimproved

Even President Dartiguenave was able to complain bitterly in 1920: "No recommendation for the well-being and prosperity of the Haitian Republic has yet been made to the Haitian Government." He cited the fact that there was not even an adequate system of public accounting to displace the Haitian chambre des comptes which was abolished. He necessary plant and arranged comptes which was abolished. He haitian chambre des comptes which was abolished. He haitian debts had yet been made. Leather Conditions varied as conditions might justify, so it is conjectured that confidential deals were common. However, from the tanners came the statement that last week's list remained unchanged, so that ought to be convincing to the smaller buyers, at least.

The call for oak sole was an agreeable surprise in all the larger markets, although no market was what the trade terms normal.

Union offal has been fairly active of late. Choice shoulders bring 25@30c; with heads moving at 11@13c. Oak offal bookings were not equal to the above, partly because dealers were a bit too firm in their figures.

There is a steady, but not a large, call for plump colored chrome skins in the Roston market. Light weights are draggy. First quality skins for men's footwear are offered 42@45c. The medium to light weights are quoted from 30@40c, with cheaper stock listed from 30@40c, with cheaper stock listed from 1s@25c.

Chicago and New York tanners report similar conditions in their markets, with a trend toward better trading, but no immediate prospects of setting satisfactory margins.

Side Upper Material

Side Upper Material

Tanners of side upper leather are fairly optimistic. A fair demand for all grades is in evidence. The major call, however, centers around the middle and cheaper qualities: top grades are slow.

Quotations are unchanged, but bids for stable lots under top grades feature the late trading. Colored elk leather, except the "choicest tannages, varies little in price and volume week after week. The active grades bring 24@30c, with a lower sort at 15@22c.

Bark and combination tanned sides are moving steadile, but buyers continue to keep within needs. No. 1 grade is quoted at 22@27c.; second, 16@20c. with cheaper lots oftered $@15c.

Buck finishes are slow of sale at present because cutting has not yet begun, although the stock is sure to move well during the coming season. Black buck has been sampled freely and seems Little attention is given to new styles, in fact, manufacturers throughout the United States would like to see footwear construction come within the limits of reason and economic policies because existing modes have cost consumers thousands of dollars just to please the eye.

These broke Tuesday to new low prices, following reports from Washington of a movement to cut rates on wheat for export and also elimination of the special export rate on coal. Northern Pacific got down to 50, and at that price was off 31% points from its year's high. Great Northern preferred at 51% was down 23% points. St. Paul preferred and Chicago & North Western were also heavily sold.

Except for two mining issues, the remainder of the stocks tabled below are industrials. Central Leather preferred is the biggest loser, with a net decline of 43% points. Kelly-Springfield and American Woolen, both of which have been particularly soft for the last month or more, show the next largest losses from the year's high prices.

Other comparatively large declines were made by Endicott Johnson, General American Tank, Mathieson Alkali. Pressed Steel Car, and United States Rubber common and preferred.

At least five other New York stocks equaled their previous 1923 lows. These were American Ice at 85%. American International at 18. American Ship & Commerce at 10%, Brown Shoe at 42%, and Crucible Steel, sciling ex-dividend 31, dipped to 57, its previous low. TARIFF REFORMS NOT ACCEPTABLE

Efforts to Cheapen Costs to Middle Classes Said Not to Attain Intended Results

BUENOS AIRES (By Mail) - In sanc tioning the budget laws for the current year the Argentine Chamber of Deputies introduced a series of modifica-Although the industrial average closed practices, and which, it is considered. last week, almost a full three-quarters may prove difficult of establishment of a point above the previous week's in the brief period remaining of the

These changes are chiefly noticeable

They have teen adversely criticized in many quarters as having a diametrically opposite effect to that intended by the legislators responsible for them, who proclaimed their desire to cheapen the cost of living to the poorer classes

Errors Alleged

It is charged in some quarters that he budget committee of the Chamber of Deputies made its recommendations without possessing full knowledge of the peculiarities of the custems tar-iff valuations, and, in consequence, has fallen into some lamentable errors of judgment.

allen into some lamentable errors of judgment.

Cotton fabrics, for example, have been lowered from 25 to 20 percent, an apparent reduction of 5 per cent, but in reality a reduction of 10 per cent, since there is a difference in the "additional" duties upon goods bearing 25 per cent and those at 20 per cent which, in effect, means that cotton goods hitherto paying a total of 32 per cent will be called upon to pay 22 per cent. Under the three classes into which cotton fabrics are divided are included velvet, organdle, poplin, voile, calleo, eambric, the prices of which fluctuate between 31.50 gold per kilo and 39 gold per kilo, while the tariff values assigned them range between a maximum of $1.50 gold per kilo and 0.90 gold per kilo.

Practical Effects

Practical Effects

One of the consequences of this discrepancy is that the fabrics which are alone used by the well-to-do will benefit to as great an extent as those pur-alone used by the well-to-do will benefit to as great an extent as those purchased by the poorer classes. For instance, it has been calculated that the six meters of organdic or poplin required to make a lady's costume will pay roughly 2 cents gold (say, 2) cents paper) less than formerly, while the six meters of calleo required for her humbler sister's dress will pay, possibly, 15 cents paper less than hitherto.

This is shown as follows: six meters of organdic or poplin will weigh more or less 350 grammes: the duty on which at present is $0.295 gold. Under the proposed schedule it would pay 0.205, or say, 2 cents gold less. Six meters of calleo weighing 486 grammes pay at present 0.90 per kilo plus 60 per cent, representing a total of $1.44, so that the 485 grammes are valued at 70 cents, which at 25 per cent plus 7 per cent pay a duty of 22½ cents. With the duty at 20 per cent plus 2 per cent "additional" this sum would be reduced to 15½ cents gold, a reduction which may possibly benefit the purchaser of a complete dress in 15 cents paper. Calico is worth today between $1.80 and 2 peace per kilo.

Revenue Loss Indicated

Hence the allegation that these re forms are not destined to cheapen the cost of living to the poorer classes to any appreciable extent, although the prime reason for their adoption was the understanding that they would attain that end. On the other hand, it is calculated that the revenue will suffer considerably thereby. Last year's offi-cial statistics show that the importa-tions of cutton goods were valued at cial statistics show that the importa-tions of cotton goods were valued at $24,000,000 gold and on this basis the new tariff duties would imply a loss of 2,500,000 gold peace to the revenue of the country.

For these reasons it is being urged in some quarters that the Senate should rise to the occasion and prevent, so serious a loss to the Nation ag the approval of these reforms would imply; especially since the great majority of the population would not be benefited to a corresponding degree.

St. Paul's debacle, of course, came long before the de-cline in the shares of the other three roads and was the result of somewhat different causes, principally the great expansion in that system's outstanding capital obligations made necessary by the extension to the Pacific coast. But in recent years quotations for the shures in the other three companies have fallen from their former high posi-tion. Moreover, they have moved with singular unanimity,

All have suffered from competition through the opening of the Panama Canal and from the St. Paul's line to the coast, from fulure to receive the same measure of relief in the form of rate increases granted to lines in other sections of the country, and from their inability to secure from the territory served a sufficient increase in local traffic to balance the losses from these causes.

The extent of the decline in the value of these shares, both in length of time and in the proportion of value lost, would appear to indicate that the markets have fully discounted all untavorable developments.

a strong position, because stocks are not burdensome, prices are reasonable, and prime quality a prominent factor. The demand for leather is still too far below production to justify tanners to purchase even the choicest hides of the year at the easiest prices for many months.

The steady influx of hides and the sluggish outlet of leather, was a topic which came before the Tanners' Council during its fall meeting in Chicago last week. After some discussion, and the offering of several remedial propositions, opinion was that a further curtailment at the tanneries would be the

With Raw Cotton Prices Soaring. Buyers Seem to Await Value Decline

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. Oct. 23
(Special)—With the prospect of famine prices for raw cotton, and all that means in higher finished cotton goods values, the primary cotton goods markets, figuratively anapping fingers at the outlook, have dragged through the last week without any very appreciable progress in either direction.

Buyers are hesitating, as if awaiting some big drop in the price of the raw material radical enough to pull down the value of the gray goods. They insist upon ignoring the size of the cotton crop, and shutting their eyes to the possibility of soaring cotton prices.

Manufacturers declare that they have never seen such an illogical situation, and do not know, how to proceed in the face of it. The buying flurry of August and September, they say, was sufficient only to absorb the floating supply of accumulated goods, and it ended long before the usual volume of fall business had been reached in primary markets.

Distributors' Stocks Low
Distributors, judging from the volume of goods going from first hands, have far less than their usual stocks, while retailers' she'ves are notoriously bare, and the mils have cleaned out all of their accumulations and are down now to the basis of their current output, most of which is deliverable now on orders. Where the trade expects the goods to come from for the winter and spring season's needs is a problem, yet the buyers have refused to meet prices barely sufficient to cover mill costs on the basis of present raw cotton values.

The week has seen only scattered activity, and the gray-goods markets, as a whole, have been very slow. Cotton is nearly a cent up from the level of a week ago, yet the gray-goods prices, on verested a construction are barely 4.60 ago, yet the gray-goods prices, on ard construction, are barely 4@ standard construction, are barely as higher.

Mills are beginning to take the only alternative they have, that of suspending production, and a very large portion of the gingham manufacturing equipment of New England is now closed down indefinitely, while even the southern gingham mills are now beginning to curtail. Some of the printcloth mills are starting now to close down more and more equipment each week, and here and there one finds a fine combed-goods plant which is entering upon heavy curtailment. New mills with a very few fine combed-goods plant which is en-tering upon heavy curtailment. New England yarn mills, with a very few exceptions, are running only a skeleton force, and have reduced their output force, and have reduced their output to a very small per cent of normal.

Print cloths, while not really active, were probably more in demand than most other types of cotton goods. One order, said to be for 600,000 yards of 36-inh goods, caused considerable comment since it was closed at a price which was generally considered extremely favorable. Trading in standard 38'4-inch 60x60s was done at 9%, 9% and finally at 10 cents, the higher prices being for spots and the lowest price having come from a resale of goods in second hand circles. Narrow goods were not active, and what business was offered in the standard constructions went at very close figures.

Fall River Has Light Week

ctions went at very close figures

structions went at very close figures.

Fall River (Mass.) reported sales of only 50,000 pieces for last week, which is hardly a fifth of a normal week's output, and it was quite natural that curtailment talk should be quite general. Prices, however, held unchanged, the major part of the sales being accounted for the low count 35-inch goods and various odd constructions.

Sheetings were moving only in small quantities and these almost invariably for quick delivery. Prices were firm and little changed despite the advance in the raw material, and second hands were holding their goods for approximately the same figure heard in first hand quarters.

Fine combed yarn goods, such as are made in New Bedford, also struck a dull spot in the trading, and it was said that little business had been forthcoming during the week, though there had been a fair volume of inquiry.

There has been little change in prices, except on very quick deliveries, which brought a premium. Volles, pongees, oxfords, and other shirting materials, and an especially active demand for fancies, notably crepes, served as the principal feature of the week. Prices on the standard plain constructions are hardly enough to cover mill costs, yet buyers are trying to get them several cents a yard lower. constructions are nardy enough to cover mill costs, yet buyers are trying to get them several cents a yard lower. On the fancies, however, it has been possible to actually congummate some of the business, and it was also re-ported that some trading in silk and cottons had been done at slightly im-proved prices.

EXTERNAL TRADE OF CANADA SHOWS SUBSTANTIAL GAIN

Total Now Close to a Billion-Newsprint Capacity Climbing Steadily

OTTAWA, Oct. 23 (Special)-Bank learings in Canada took a jump of 125 per cent during the week ended Oct. 18, as compared with those for the corresponding period last year.

There has been a noteworthy inrease in business, but this marked increase in clearings was due chiefly to the heavy transactions occasioned by the recent subscriptions of $200,000,-000 to the Canadian Government's loan. on to the Canadian Government's loan.

External trade returns for September again showed a marked increase over those of last year, the value of imports and exports being $140,108,000, an increase of about $7,000,000 over that for the corresponding month in 1922.

External Trade Larger

External Trade Larger

Statistics for the six months ended September show that the value of the total external trade was $925,000,000, exports being $461,030,000 and imports $464,330,000, the increase in exports over those for the corresponding month in 1922 having been $65,571,000. American business interests should be specially interested in the figures for imports, no less than $320,000,000 having been from the United States, which thus got two-thirds of Canada's trade.

This marked increase in buying power is not due to heavy borrowing abroad, but rather to increased production at home. Canada's borrowings in the United States for this year will be under 50 per cent of what they were for 1922. Not only was the Canadian Government's loan readily taken up, but the Province of Ontario's $40,000,000 loan is also being attended with decided success.

According to the best obtainable figures, the Canadian newsprint mills during September produced 48 per cent of all the "news" turned out in Canada and the United States, the total for the two countries being 212,955 tons. These figures are based on returns from 65 companies, 45 of which are in the United States and 20 in Canada. It will thus be seen that the average production of the Canadian mills is much greater than that of the American The total production of American mills was 110,209 tons.

These will total 500 tons, or an additional 150,000 tons for the year. The sessions of the Canadian Pulp Wood Commission in the Province of New Brunswick have brought out quite as strong an expression of opinion against the proposed embargo, as did those in Nova Scotia. The settlers are practically a unit against it, and the same may be said for the leaders in the pulp and paper industry in New Brunswick. In the meantime F. D. J. Plenty of Work

That there is no lack of employment for men who really want work, and are not particular what they do, is evident from the fact that Minister of Immigration Robb reports that more than 10,000 openings for winter employment have been received.

As the number of harvesters from Britain was approximately 12,000, it is of financial ethics, that no Government of the contributing people, enlarging the taxes or creating new ones, while those already in force are not applied to the public services, in an economical and efficient manner.

Therefore, it has been deemed advisable to introduce a strict economy in administration, reducing all expenses to the minimum and watching continually for its enforcement.

To carry out this recommendation in its entirety there must be:

on the fancies, however, it has been possible to actually consummate some of the business, and it was also reported that some trading in silk and cottons had been done at slightly improved prices.

Yarn markets are still prostrate, and though the stiffening of raw cotton values has prevented any further weakening in the price quotations, spinners have been unable, owing to the lack of demand, to advance their prices in accordance with the rise of cotton values.

Walter James Chambers

JAMES CHAMBERS of Liverpool is well known to those interested In the world's shipping as the head of one of the best established and soundest of British shipping companies, even though in the public eye he may not figure so largely as some who held conspicuously high official positions during the war.

The Mersey Docks and Harbor Board numbers him among its members. He is also chairman of the pilot's committee, and as the whole of the six or seven miles of docks along the riverfront on the Mersey are under the direct control of the board, the office carries with it no little responsibility. Mr. Chambers' fitness for that responsibility may be judged by the fact that he controls a fleet of cargo steamers, numbering 14 or 15 vessels, and also a ships store business in addition. The vessels belong to the Lancashire Shipping Company, but are managed by James Chambers & Co.

The first Mr. James Chambers was concerned in the 'running of the original White Star Line to Australia, under the title of H. T. Wilson & Chambers. In 1865 Mr. Chambers retired from this firm and recommenced trading, as James Chambers & Co. The business is still carried on at the same address to which it was removed in 1867, and the pictures of old salling vessels on the walls give some idea of the long standing business with which the present Mr. W. J. Chambers has been actively associated since 1876.

Public Not Stinting on Necessities-Packers Watch South American Deal

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 (Special)—Although industrial activity in the Chicago dis-trict is showing its usual seasonal de-cline, the public is displaying no inclination to stint itself in the purchas-ing of necessities. This is evidenced by the increased sales reported by by the increased sales reported by leading makers of men's clothing, all of whem are running substantially ahead of the corresponding period of last year. The Kuppenheimer & Co. in the first 10 months of the current year did a business 15 per cent in excess of that transacted in the corresponding period of 1922, with the indicated total for 1923 at $20,000,000, as compared with less than $18,000,000 last—year. Chicago packers with South Ameri-Chicago packers with South American interests again have a problem on their hands as the result of two developments. First came the news that the Buenos Aires Government is negotiating for the purchase of the properties spf the Anglo-South American Packing Company, Ltd., for £1,500,000 and to enter the packing industry as a competitor of the Compania Swift Internacional, Ltd., controlled by Swift & Co. interests. Then came the decision of American and English packers to stop buying cattle for export, pending a ruling on the new minimum price law.

South American Deal

South American Deal
In connection with the first development, officials of the Compania Swift Internacional, Ltd., have adopted a waiting attitude, for although an agreement on the sale of the properties is said to have been reached between the Anglo-South American Company and the Government, approval of the Legislature is still necessary. None of the officials would express his bellef as to what the result would be should the Government enter the packing trade as a competitor of private interests.

Local, packers say that it is impossible for them to operate in Argentina, except at a loss, under the provisions of the new minimum price law, which they characterize as "impracticable, uneconomic, and unconstitutional."

Notre Dame, and the Grinnell formations will be variations of the Notre Dame shift. With several good passers in the backfield, and a pair of fast ends, it is expected that Grinnell will gain much ground by forward passing.

Although the backfield men huve nothed varsity experience, they are improving consistently, and much is expected of them. M. W. Sweet '26 is playing a heady game in the backfield. He plays fullback on offense, and quarter on defense. He is an open-field runner of marked ability, and is an amount of pluck will make up for the back. On offense his position is right half. Wing is a good line smasher. F. G. Green '25 is now receiving first call at left half, but is being hard kitchen '25, M. J. Smith '24, and E. M. Kingery '24.

Grinnell has been handicapped from the lack of a good quarterback for sevited.

MANAGER OF RED SOX

President J. A. R. Quinn of the Boston American League Baseball Club has an-nounced that Lee Fohl, former manager nounced that Lee Fold, former manager of the St. Louis Browns, will lead the Red Sox next season. The arrangement, it appears, was entered into at New York during the recent World's Series, but until late yesterday nothing was made public. It had been generally understood, from the time that Quinn asumed charge of affairs in Boston, that Foll would be nominated to manage the Red Sox.

Deft tackle appears to be giving Head Coach T. A. D. Jones of Yale considerable concern. Yesterday he tried out E. F. Blair '24 in place of J. L. Miller '24, who was rather weak in tackling in the Buck-hell game.

The Harvard-Holy Cross game produced some very excellent tackling with the latter players more consistent than the Harvard men. Harvard showed some very crude tackling in the games with Rhode Island State and Middlebury and the improvement Saturday was quite noticeable.

By electing L. F. Daley captain of the Harvard freshman eleven yesterday, the Crimson firstyear men selected an Andower or Exeter Academy man for the first time since the war. Daley was a brilliant player at Andover and a splendid leader. His regblar place in the lineup was at tackle; but he played defensive center at one time with much success. Center at one time with much success.

Trying to finish a football game in the dark is most unsatisfactory to spectators as well as players and it would seem as if the rule makers would do well if they inserted a rule to the effect that the referee shall call a game when it becomes too dark. The last few minutes of the Yale-Bucknell game were played under conditions which made it practically impossible for the spectators to follow the ball.

When Yale faces Brown Saturday, the latter team expects to have four powerful players in its lineup for the first time since the beginning of the season. They are Parkman Sayward 25, last year's varsity end; Robert Bacon Jr. 28, starend on last fail's freshmen eleven; Eumund Howarth 25, promising backfield man and good punter and C. B. Dixon 26.

Followers of Harvard, Yale and Prince-ton freshman athletics will get their first real chance to compare the relative strength of the three teams Saturday when Princeton 1327 meets Phillips Excter Academy. Yale defeated Exeter Oct. 13, 3 to 3 while Harvard won from Exeter, 12 to 3.

in this way.

Cobb's New Record

Detroit Star Has Hit for 300

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 CPL-T. R. Cobi

string reached 15. He then finished with five consecutive years in the 300 class.

In compiling his wonderful record Cobb made more than 200 hits in each of eight season, and three times hit in the 400 class, his highest mark being 420 in 1911. The only time in his major league career he failed to hit up to 300 was 1905, his first season. That year he was not a regular, and in the games he played had to be content with a batting average of 240. Over the stretch of 18 years in the American League his batting average is 372.

Cobb's string of 18 consecutive 300 marks is likely to remain a record for many years, as G. H. Ruth and G. H. Sisler, with strings of seven 300 consecutive marks each, have the best starts of any of the present-day players on the Georgian's record.

Tristram Speaker has been in the 300 class 13 years, but his string was broken in 1919. He has turned the frick the last four seasons, but it is improbable that Speaker will be in the game for the next 14 years hitting at a 300 clip, which would be necessary to equal Cobb's record. Likewise, Capt. E. T. Collins had a chance to join the Wagner-Cobb circle, but after hitting in the 300 class for seven years he dropped out in 1917 and 1918, and now his consecutive string totals only five.

THE managerial situation in the American League has been cleared somewhat by the signing of G. H. Sisler to handle the St. Louis Browns for 1924, and the acceptance by Lee Fohl of President J. A. R. Quinn's terms relative to a Boston contract. This leaves only two cities without leaders—Washington and Chicago. Announcement of the appointment of the successors to Owen Bush and W. J. Gleason may be expected shortly. Tristram Speaker, the Cleveland pilot has departed for his home in Hubbard City, Tex. following a 10-day outing in Canada, Speaker said that the Indians will train next spring 'at Lakeland, Fla., and that his veteran pitchers will again be sent to Hot Springs. Ark., for conditioning, about two weeks in advance of the regular party's excursion South.

Another man prominent in major league circles, who has returned to his home, is F. L. Chance, former leader of the Boston Red. Sox. Chance declares he has two propositions to lead major league ball clubs in 1924, but is unwilling to make a specific announcement at this time.

The World's Series is still more or less a topic of discussion, and not the least phase, judging by newspapermen's conversation, is the manner in which the press arrangements were carried out. Frederick Lieb, president of the Buseball Writers' Association, and his assistant. P. H. Cappé, are accorded a great deal of commendation for the smooth way they kept things running during the big games. The presence of G. H. Ruth was the occasion for a holiday yesterday that hazleton. Pa. The mines closed down at noon and the public schools of all the towns in the region closed at an early hour. Mondero, a mine worker of Coleraine, who fitched for the Hasleton team, struck the home run king out twice in an exhibition game.

It took a relief pitcher, Thomas, to prevent Kansas City from settling the championahly series at the park of the Bules, as the westerners are called, tied the scoro in the ninth inning with a five-run raily, but Graves' successor in the box stopped the scoring and the Orioles won the game in their half of the ninth.

BRITISH GOLF NOTES

LONDON, Oct. 12 (Special Correspondence)—A pair of brothers, W. L. and A. L. Hartley, have succeeded the brothers Murray (Romford) as holders of the London amateur foursomes tournament. The Hartleys defeated the MacCallum brothers (Sonning) in the third round by 2 and 1. The Murrays defeated Wethered and Legge (Worplesdon) in the third round by 1 hole. In the semifinals H. E. Taylor and A. V. Hambro (Sunningdale) won their match against the Murrays. This match was square at the eighteenth and was taken to the twenty-third before Sanningdale sank a five-foot putt for a win.

In the final the youthful brothers (they are both under 20) triumphed over the mature experience of the Sunningdale pair. Apart from a little weakness in putting, the Hartleys played brilliant golf. At the sixteenth, where they won the match by 3 and 2, their score was only two over 4s.

score was only two over 4s.

Much talk goes on still as to the relative merits of Miss Cecil Leitch and Miss Joyce Wethered when at their best, and it is floped that some tournament next year will bring them together. Miss Wethered's recent performance of 74 round the classic links of St. Andrews, when she defeated both E. B. H. Blackwell and Lord Charles Hope, though it was only a friendly game, stamps her as a wonderful golfer. Mr. Blackwell gave her one hole and one stroke and she defeated him by 6 and 5. Lord Charles Hope is scratch at St. Andrews, and tried to give her three strokes, but was defeated by 4 and 3.

WINNIPEG WANTS AMATEURS ONLY

Will Not Have Professional Hockey-Two Leagues to Start

WINNIPEG, Man. Oct. 19 (Special Correspondence) — During the coming season this city will get the best brand of hockey since 1929, when the Falcons won the Canadian and world's amateur championship, according to present indications. Contrary to predictions made at the end of last season, Winnipeg will not have any professional hockey this winter, and local fans in general are pleased, as exhibition games in which professionals participated last spring did not make much of a hit with the sport followers here.

Winnipeg has devaloped many great hockey players. The Western Canada Professional Hockey League, which is considered by many to be the fastest circuit in the country, is composed to a great extent of players who learned the game on Winnipeg ice. Yet in spite of the fact that Winnipeg has lost its greatest ice stars, it seems satisfied tolean back and enjoy the amateurs.

Two senior bockey leagues will play in Winnipeg, namely the Tigers and the Winnipeg, namely the Tigers and the Winnipegs. The other league, also an annateur organization, to be known as the Central Canada Hockey League, appears at present to be by far the stronger, with Port Arthur and Fort William, the two Ontario towns, lined up with the Falcons, who won the Manitoba League title last year, and Selkirk, Man, another formidable organization.

At the present writing the Central Canada League has not yet restrained.

Sellirk, Man, another formidable organisation.

At the present writing the Central Canada League has not yet gained affiliation with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. The action of the Manitoba Hockey Association in barring Falcons and Selkirks from their senior league, caused those two teams to line up with Port Arthur and Fort William. As the new league has coraled the bulk of the hockey talent, it appears as if it would have a difficult task in gaining affiliations with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, simply because the Manitoba officials may stand in the way, if the Central Canada League fails to gain affiliation with the Canadian amateur organization, it will operate independently, but will not be eligible to enter the play-off for the Canadian amateur title.

As there will be eight senior teams playing in Winnipeg this winter, local enthusiasts will see plenty of hockey. In order to give the public a taste of the professional variety. W. Holmes, owner of an artificial ice plant here, has arranged for several exhibition games between professional teams which include many former Winnipeg boys.

The amateur leagues will start play urly in December, although there will several exhibition games before that ite, with amateur teams from Clevend, O., and St. Paul, Minn., opposing cal teams.

The term miniature is generally applied to problems not having more than seven pieces, but they, are mostly in more than two-move problems, because in the latter class the length of play is too little to bring out the strategic possibilities of a group of men so limited in number.

Newport's Victory

Record Is Broken By Coble from Monitor Bureau

London, Eng., Oct. 23
WITH the narrow defeat of the Newport Engby Football Club at Leleester, Saturday, by 7, points to 5, one of the most re-points to 5, one of the most remarkable periods of success in the history of the game came to a close. Since April, 1922, the Weishmen had not lost a single game, although engaging in 47 fixtures—truly a wonderful record.

The Leicester team that encompassed their downfall, Saturday, was of exceptional strength. W. W. Wakefield, famous English forward who is likely to captain his country's fifteen this season, led the pack, while the rear divisions included such men as H. L. Price, H. L. V. Day and A. M. Smallwood, all of whom have figured prominently for England in international games.

Lelcester, it is interesting to note, adopts an unusual formation of seven forwards in the pack and five three-quarter backs. That their seven should have held Newport's eight, which contained five internationals, is a remarkable testimony to their strength and skill. Now that Newport's run of success is interrupted, the Heriotonians of Scotland claim the worthlest unbeaten record, having won every match played during the season of 1951-25. Leicester, it is interesting to note.

COLUMBIA MAY NOT SAIL TODAY

Damage Is Slight but Tide and Conditions May Postpone

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 23—The chooner Columbia, American challenger for the International Fisher-men's Trophy, was found today to men's Trophy, was found today to have had her keel slightly splintered by striking a rock just after leaving Gloucester for Nova Scotia yesterday. Capt. Benlamin Pine, her skipper, with a committee of experts, examined the vessel this morning as soon as she had been pulled out upon a marine railway here.

The tide must go down before workmen can start planing down the keel, it was announced; but it is hoped that the Columbia may be floated off at high tide this evening, ready for another start for Canadian waters. A sliver of wood about five feet long has been partly severed from the keel.

The schooner Eisle undergoing repairs on the railway, was, hauled off today to make room for the challenger. The Eisle raced in the trophy contest at Halifax two years ago and lost to the Bluenese, the present champion which is now being groomed for her tussle with the Columbia.

Secret word would be brought her of intended fighting or sacrifice, and on one occasion she prevented war het ween two tribes, standing between them and making them pile up their weapons on either side till the heaps were five feet high.

Convinced that much of the lawlessness was due to tack of employment, she opened up trade between the tribes, overcoming their motual fear and distrust of one another. So well did she understand the natives and in such reverence was she held by them that the British High Commissioner and his staff left the administration of the district in her hands. The foundations of civilized order in Okoyong were laid by her. As vice-

Mary Slessor in Stained Window

At last she felt free to leave her mother, and after training in Edinburgh set sail for Calabar in 1876. From the first she took a keen personal interest in the natives, and set herself to master their language thoroughly. When this was accomplished, she left the mission station and penetrated into Okoyong, still farther from civilization. She lived alone, practically in native fashion in order to be able to send money to her mother in Dundee, but it was not long before she was a power in the land.

With characteristic energy she set herself to combat heathen customs involving human sacrifice, and alone and unarmed she would face an infuriated mob of natives, till by her adroit, ness and powers of persuasion she had saved their intended victims. All abandoned children, and they were many, she took to live with her in her own hut, caring for them with the greatest tenderness. Her fearlessness and determination soon had its effect upon the natives, and they began to appreciate the greater security of liv-

Dundee Art Gallery Honors

Sacrifice and Devotion to Welfare of Okoyong Natives spondence)—A window to the memory of Mary Slessor has been unveiled in the building of the Dundee Art Gallery, scenes from her life being effectively depicted in the stained glass. From earliest childhood Mary Slessor was stirred by the desire to do missionary work and although family finances compelled her to enter a Dundee factory when but 11 years old and kept her toiling at the looms for 14 long years, she never lost sight of her great ideal.

Tresident of the native court, she administered strict justice, though not always in legal form, and by her intimate knowledge of the antive court, she administered strict justice, though not always in legal form, and by her intimate knowledge of the native court, she administered strict justice, though not always in legal form, and by her intimate knowledge of the native court, she administered strict justice, though not always in legal form, and by her intimate knowledge of the native charge.

Although the "White Queen of Okovong" she remained to the end a simple massuming Scottish "wifey," with a strong sense of humor and shrewd wit. When she passed away early in 1915, it was recorded of her in the strict justice, though not always in legal form, and by her intimate knowledge of the native charge. DUNDEE, Oct. 5 (Special Corre-president of the native court, she ad-her great ideal.

Those were years of self-education, greatness of character she has earned to the self-education of the self-educat greatest tenderness. Her fearlessness and determination soon had its effect upon the natives, and they began to appreciate the greater security of living she was instituting, and, one by one, chiefs and others would come secretly to thank her and to beginer to continue the reforms they themselves were unable to enforce.

ITS DAIRY INDUSTRY

Missionary Career Is Unparalleled in Record of Self-

for she was a great reader, quick to grasp all that was good and true in what she read. During this time, too, early experience in missionary work was gained by her work in the slums which brought her into touch with some of the roughest of the rough, but even they were subdued by her unfinching courage, and the breadth and depth of her love.

At last she felt free to leave her mother, and after training in Edinburgh set sall for Calabar in 1876.

DURBAN HARBOR TO BE DEVELOPED

Expert Advice Justifies Expense of Improvements Insuring Great Future for Harbor

DURBAN, South Africa, (Special, Correspondence) - Since the union of governments in South Africa the Min-istry has given to Durbah Harbor every consideration for its progress and development, and from parlia-mentary debates it is evident that the mentary debates it is evident that the expert advice which the Government has received justifies a judicious expenditure to assure a great future for the harbor. The harbor advisory board and its staff of engineers are now bulsy drawing out plans to be submitted for the approval of Parliament;

For the present the primary requirement is additional shed accommodation, and it is proposed that double-storied sheds should be built for each berth, the old hydraulic cranes disposed of, and new electric
cranes disposed of, and new electric cranes aubstituted. As regards railway expansion to and from the wharves, the most natural developwharves, the most natural develop-ment would have been at Congella, but as that area has been handed over of large quantities of coal on the quayside for ready handling is received in careful consideration by the port authorities.

In dealing with dredging and dredging plant, the Government expert has recommended that a floating pipe line connected with the dredgers should be introduced inatead of the present faying term. He considers that this can be carried out at one-third of the present faying superintendent who should be officer in charge of dredgers and dredging superintendent who should be officer in charge of dredgers and dredging.

The construction of a huge graving dock is already nearing completion at Congella, which, when finished, will accommodate the largest vessel affoot. It is hoped to have it ready for use by the end of next year. The effective length of the dock will be 150, feet, and the width at the widest point, 125 feet 6 inches. The most modern and up-to-date pumping apphratus is being installed, and when feady it will constitute one of the miost effective repairing basins in the Southern Hemisphere.

Maize elevators for the handling of the southern Hemisphere.

the Union's grain crop in bulk is an-other development which has nearly reached completion and should be symilable for next year's crop.

wharves, the most natural development would have been at Congella, but as that area has been handed over to private industries, the requisition of the water front is recommended, together with the building of permanent wharves, the equipment of these wharves with transit sheds, and cranes, and ample room for railway sidings and roads.

A wagon tippier is also advised, in combination with an ordinary type of coal hoist on the quay front. This would eliminate some of the time occupied in hauling the coal, and would reduce the cost and preakage and handling. The question of storage of large quantities of coal on the quayside for ready handling is received.

Only 14 Perfectly Preserved

Of the nearly two hundred copies extant of the probably 500 originally issued in 1623 only 14 are in what book collectors consider a perfect state of preservation. In the large majority of copies the preliminary leaves and the last leaf are missing, giving silent testimony to the hard but appreciative usage which the book underwent in its early years. Only three or four copies are now in the original binding. It was published at £1, and for several generations was not considered to be worth more. The gamut of pecuniary value that this gamut of pecuniary value that this remarkable book has run is perhaps no better illustrated than in the his-no better illustrated than in the history of the Bodleian copy.

By an agreement entered into in 1610 with Sir Thomas Bodley, the London Stationers Company agreed to present to the Bodleian Library one perfect copy of every book published by a member of the company. Under the terms of this agreement, a copy of the First Folic in speets was delivered. of the First Folio, in sheets, was delivered to the library shortly after its publication in November, 1623. It was then turned over to the university binder, bound by him and returned to the library, as the records show, chained to the shelves and nearly read to pieces by the next two generations of Oxford students. When the third folio appeared in 1664 this first edition was considered merely a duplicate and consequently sold by the thrifty librarian, doubtless for a few shillings. All trace of it was lost until about All trace of it was fost until about 20 years ago, when it was discovered in the library of a Derbyshire family, identified beyond doubt by its standard Oxford binding, in which other books of the Bodleian, bound about that same time, were still standing. After some negotiation to book was bought back in 1906 by the Bodleian, but instead of changing hands for a few shillings it required £3000 to reverse the action of Bodley's librarian of 1664.

On This Rests Fame

On This Rests Fame

Perhaps no book has had a more interesting sale history than this volume, in spite of its wretched typesetting and miserable press work. Yet on this rests the "fair fabric of Shakespeare's fame." In the first 50 years after publication, it is known to have been sold by booksellers at less than the pound at which it was published. The first recorded auction sale is of 1687, but the price is unknown. The earliest priced record of an auction sale is of 1756, when a copy was sold for three guineas. This copy is now in the John Rylands Library at Manchester. About 1760, David Garrick, the actor, purchased a copy for £116s. In 1790 London was thrilled when the Duke of Roxburgh paid £35 for a copy. In 1854 the American collector had appeared and paid £153 for a fair-conditioned specimen. The perfect copy in the British Museum.

No. 1 in Sidney Lee's Census—was apparently sold for 13 guineas in 1792, and again for £121 16s. in 1818. It came into the possession of the British and again for £121 16s, in 1818. It came into the possession of the British Nation in 1846 as a bequest from the Right Hon. Thomas Grenville. Prices realized advanced rapidly toward the close of the nineteenth century, the close of the nineteenth century, the Brayton Ives copy selling in New York, in 1891, for $4200, and a copy being purchased in June, 1892, by J. Plerpont Morgan for more than £1000, and one a few weeks later at Christie's fetching the then record price of £1700. On May 16, 1922, the copy formerly owned by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, and pronounced by Lee' to be the finest copy in private hands, was sold at Sotheby's to Dr. Rosenbach of Philadelphia for £3600, or approximately $40,000.

On May 16, 1922, the copy formerly owned by the Baroness Burdest-Coutts, and pronounced by Lee to be the finest copy in private hands, was sold at Solteby's to Dr. Rosenbach of Philadelphia for £ 5800 to a sproximately $40,000.

Typical of Tendency.

The crossing of this superb copy to America is typical of 'the fendency in recent years. "In 1966," writes Gerirude M. Ridgeway, in The Outlook of June 15 of this year ran to $5,000 and beyond. In This present year, when all the literary world is recalling in one way or another the publication of the First Folio of Shakespeare and when celebrations of some form or other commemorating the three hundredth anniversary of its appearance are being held in many lands and by many peoples the Newberry Library is more than ever proud to be the owner of a copy of that most sought for and most prized of all books. It was bought in 1896 of Henry Probasco, of Cincinnati, who in turn obtained it in 1866 of Joseph Lilly, the London bookseller. Back of that its provenience is nuknown. This copy has the fly-leaf with Ben Jonson's verse in culcay of the portrait, the title-page, and the last leaf in facsimile. Otherwise it is in very good condition, lacking home other of the 454 leaves. When Sidney Lee, the eminent Shakespeare scholar, saw the copy in 1993, shortly after issuing his Census of First Folios, he stated that its condition was better than he had been led to believe from the description he had received, and consequently moved it up on his scale from No. 117 to No. 92.

Since the First Folio was recorded in Stationers' Hall on Nov. 8, 1623, there have been some 200 separate editions of Shakespear's plays, while the number of separate plays issued must be many times that number, to say nothing of the separate issue of the poems. In that first collection nine of the fourteen comedies, five of the ten histories, and six of the twelve

There is shown all the work from the clay modeling of the kindergarten to the complete machineshop equipment made by the highest grades in vocational training. In the center of this tent is erected an inclosure in which, afternoon and evening, pupils from the high and grammar schools provide entertainment. Incidentally, there is a large platform in the main tent in which the pupils of the schools put on pageants, and where programs are given by glee clubs, singing societies, musical organizations, and individuals. But in the little theater in the school tent were presented complete programs from 2:30 in the afternoon to 9:30 at night, every day of this year's fair.

These programs included songs and playlets in Latin, French, Spanish, and English; pageants by groups of students, folk-dances in costume, music by the instrumental and vocal clubs of the various schools, and, at least once each day, a motion picture loaned by the extension department of the University of California. The programs presented were made up of numbers used regularly in the school work, so that nothing was especially prepared for this week of entertain-

Driftwood Carved by

RS. G. DE BURGZAC, a French sculptor, has discovered personality in bits of driftwood carved by the ocean. By the use of war, which under her fingers becomes face, hands, or feet, she completes and animates the figures she discerns in the pieces of wood. The ocean could not find a better interpreter of its in-tentions, for in all her work she keeps the original lines which the waves ave worn.

Through this collaboration with the sea unexpected and interesting results are achieved. Here is an old woman ent with a load of fagots, a grotesque Chinese figure, a gypsy glancing through her half-drawn veil. There are a series of romantic silhouettes: a woman on a rock, with wind-blown garments; another smelling a rose; sprightly dancers, Sarah Bernhardt in a tragic rôle.

sculptured Carabosse, ugly rone of French children's stories, was made from a piece of wood snaped like a harp, with the grain hinting at the folds of a great cloak and a hood from which peeped a face. The addition of a staff for the outspread arm, and a staff for the outspread arm, and a made from a piece of wood shaped like touch to the features made a realistic work which in its grotesqueness and vividness could hardly have been bet-ered.

It is not so much the features of de Burgzac, French Sculptor, Has these statuettes which are remarkable Completed Forms She Discerned in as the line, which is animated to a degree seldom seen even in fine degree seldom seen even in fine sculpture. Some of the bits of wood give an almost uncanny impression of life and movement with their clever disposal of robes and the emergence of human limbs and features. Comparison of these figures with the Tanagra figurines hardly seems inept.

Mrs. de Burgzac does not confine herself to simple shapes. Some of the pieces have three figures. Often her work shows humor in the best comic note, and real imaginative power. power. Not infrequently it has beauty, and occasionally a quality which might almost be described as sublimity. There are burdened peas-ants that might have come out of a picture by Millet, and other figures which might have been conceived by Molière, or have stepped out Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream." Still others evoke memories of the Russian ballet.

Indeed, to look at a collection of these driftwood statuettes is to be irresistibly reminded of a whole range of literature and art. The present French fad for these fancies of the sea has much to commend it.

Nor was all the small space within the walls thickly settled, for one of the gleasantest features of Elizabethan London was its gardens. The finest of these were in the northwest section, but almost every private house had its inclosure of flowers and fruit trees; and foreigners, visiting the city, never failed to mention the gardens of the monasteries with admiration. Many of the curious alleys, paved courts, and back passages in the modern city owe their puzzling topography to the fact that they follow the forms of the gardens of Tudor householders. It is no wonder that the Elizabethan plays teem with references to flowers and fruits.

population was about one hundred thousand, increasing by 1600 to one hundred and thirty thousand. But the difference between one hundred thousand and ten millions is not more atriking than the difference in area. London was still a walled town, with only a meager scattering of houses beyond the walls, except toward the west, where it was beginning to merge with the town of Westminster. The London proper, within the walls, coincided roughly with the business section now known as "The City," and the latter measures six hundred and seventy-three acres, or a liftle more than a square miles, or twenty-six and a half miles square, and the tininess of Elizabethan London will be still more evident.

In that day the city lay entirely north of the Thames, the southern abore being outside the jurisdiction of the corporation. The wall, which began on the east with the Tower, ran first north, then east, and then south, making its second turn just beyond St. Paul's Cathedral, its course being marked today by the names aldgate, Bishopgate, Moorgate, Cripplegate, Nowgate, and Ludgate, and Hackfriars, or Bridewell, on the river. To trace this line on a modern map is most filluminating.

Bach's Favorite

"Now let me show you the most perfect of all keyed instruments," and Mr. Dolmetisch takes you over to the clavishord he has made in his own workship, a gem of craftsmanship. As he plays upon it and displays its marrelous subtletles of tone, you understand why it was Bach's favorite instrument, and register a vow to possess one yourself some day. The smallest, and the sweetest toned instrument that exists, it puts you out of conceit with the plane forever.

Mr. Dolmetisch, to whom it is clearly a favorite child, will not even allow that its small tone makes it unsuitable for modern concert performances. He that its small tone makes it unsuitable for modern concert performances. He has played to two thousand people, and its tone, he asserts, has carried perfectly. True, it is too tender an instrument ever to play concerted music, or even to accompany the human voice. "Is it surprising," he asks, "that this divinely shy instrument has been unable in a noisy and hustling age to compete with the modern plane, which in mere strength can nearly equal an orchestra?"

The Crime Indifference

destiny, the American people, endowed with the inalienable powers granted only to those of a democracy, are too much incliffed to stand aside and permit themselves to be influenced, if not actually governed, by an assertive and unwisely controlled minority. It has been the confident assertion of the smug and complacent that no great calamity could ever overtake their established institutions because of the latent or reserve strength represented by conserva-tive voters who heretofore have been regarded somewhat as "minute men," ready to respond in defense of the country in the hour of need.

But the fact is that these reserve voters do not respond. Their absence from the polls was never more marked than in the 1922 elections, where in many of the states the issue was clearly defined and where the failure to express the wishes of the majority resulted in the election of lawmakers unacceptable to the conservative voters who failed to express their choice until the harm had been done. This indifference resulted, in Massachusetts, in the defeat of the proposed state law, enacted by the Legislature and signed by the Governor, committing the Commonwealth to concurrent action in enforcing the terms of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution. This enactment, under the provisions of the referendum, was submitted to the electors of the State for ratification or rejection. At the time of the election in 1922 there were 1,279,108 registered voters in Massachusetts, which number probably does not represent all those who are entitled to a vote but are not registered. It is an interesting commentary upon the boasted availability of the "minute men" in times of absolute need that the total vote cast for and against the proposed enactment was 743,598, or about 58 per cent of the total vote registered. and no doubt a much lower percentage of the total number actually entitled to register and vote.

In many of the states of the American Union at the last election there were chosen for senators and representatives in Congress, as well as for legislative offices within the states, the candidates of the radical elements, ever self-assertive and active in politics. It is important to remember that the radical advocates are always active and aggressive, and that their followers go to the polls whenever the opportunity is presented. They are electing the lawmakers and dictating the legislative policies of Congress and of the legislatures of many of the states. They are seeking more and more insistently to gain control of the school boards in the cities, thus making their first move to "reform" the educational system by substituting their own doctrinal theories. They are seeking, through the control of legislative bodies, to gain sufficient power to dictate the methods of state-controlled colleges and universities by displacing presidents, professors and instructors who are regarded as confirmed conservatives.

The flood of proposed measures which awaits the opening of the forthcoming session of Congress is intives who quite reasonably claim to have received their warrant of authority from their constituents. It is a reasonable forecast that the efforts heretofore made to enact special or class legislation will be exceeded in the next Congress. And who is responsible? The industrious radical cannot be blamed. Whatever his convictions, however much one may be inclined to disagree with his viewpoint, he has shown the courage and the willingness to vote as he thinks, the sincerity to back, his judgment at the polls. And he has a right to demand that those whom he has helped to positions of power fulfill their obligations to him. It is thus that the thing we call democracy is expressive.

By no stretch of the imagination can it be presumed that a nation governed by a minority of its normal voting strength can be safely or properly governed. Interesting computations show, for instance, that in North Dakota, at the last general election, the highest percentage of the registered vote recorded in any state went to the polls. In electing a United States Senator, 67 per cent of the total registered vote participated. That was a good showing as far as numbers are concerned. Former Governor Frazier, once recalled from the executive office by a vote of the people, was chosen Senator. And yet he was elected by 35 per cent of the State's registered voters. In Iowa, to the consternation of conservative business men, Smith W. Brookhart defeated the "regular" Republic ans in the primary and the Democratic candidate in the general election. But it appears that 55 per cent of the registered voters of Iowa did not go to the pollsat all. Yet Senator Brookhart will represent that sovereign State in the United States Senate, as he has a right to do, simply because of the indifference of those who, had they expressed their preference, would have defeated him overwhelmingly. Senator Brookhart's warrant of authority comes from but 29 per cent of the registered voters of Iowa.

Parallel cases appear in almost every state in which a radical was successful, and in many in which there was no notable overturning of existing political conditions. It took only 28 per cent of Wisconsin's registered vote to re-elect La Follette. The 30 per cent of the voters in Michigan joined in the senatorial election, and the successful candidate, a Democrat, the first-to be elected from that State in many years, received his commission by grace of 16 per cent of the State's registered vote. Senator Wheeler of Montana polled only 30 per cent of his State's vote, and Howell of Nebraska, classed as a radical, had but 32 per cent. In the State of Washington, Senator Poindexter, a progressive man, with the advantage of two terms in the Senate and the close friendship of the President, went down in defeat before a radical Democrat. The victorious candidate polled 17 per cent of the State's registered vote. Facts such as these raise the question as to whether a people that gives so little attention to the duties of democracy is entirely, fit to enjoy the powers and privileges of democracy. And when we note that the normal election returns in the United States show a vote of about 49 per cent of the actual voting strength, while in England about 80 per cent go to the polls, and in Germany 90 per cent of the vote is ordinarily forthcoming, the necessity for reaching a solution to the question as to what is wrong with American citizenship becomes imperative.

WITHIN a comparatively recent period a new word,

"Nordic," has been invented and its use has spread rapidly. Used originally only by those who devised it, anthropologists and ethnologists, it has crept into a growing literature in books and magazines, and from there into newspaper articles and popular lectures. It is now in a fair way to becoming adopted in general speech. In origin and in use by experts, at the beginning it referred to physical and spiritual characteristics that were supposed to be confined to certain northern races of men. Skulls were "Nordic." Bones in length and shape were "Nordic." Certain evidences of bodily strength and endurance were "Nordic." And ability to dominate and control other races and peoples was declared to be "Nordic," Gradually the literature that has grown about the word has assumed the character of a propaganda, the object of which is the exaltation and glorification of a vaguely defined "Nordie"

The study of origins and characteristics of races and the classification of their good and bad points is of andoubted value. Knowledge thus gained, if applied to the elimination of inferior qualities and the development of valuable traits, helps greatly in the advancement of a particular kind of men and of all kinds. But the quest of this knowledge, and the use of it after it is acquired, may easily lead in another and less fortunate direction. Much of the "Nordic" literature of the day shows this objectionable tendency. It is devoted too largely to sheer laudation of all that is supposed to be "Nordic." Weaknesses or wrong traits of the race, or races, included in the term, are glossed over or never mentioned. Only the fine and strong characteristics attributed to the northern folk are discovered and emphasized. Not a few of the best qualities that inhere in all peoples and are displayed conspicuously by individuals among them are seized upon as if they were distinctly "Nordic" and scarcely existed in other races.

The danger of all this is twofold. First, it develops and fosters self-admiration and conceit on the part of the constantly lauded race, with accompanying disdain of other races; and, secondly, it leads the complacent 'Nordic" to a notion, which becomes an obsessing belief, that he is by nature superior to all others, that his is a "chosen" race, with rights beyond those possessed by others, and with a "mission" to control, or lead, or dominate its neighbors on this planet.

The same things happen to a race or a people that gets into this frame of mind as to an individual. It becomes offensive to its associates. It lives in an atmosphere of self-admiration. It ceases to learn and hence stops growing. Weakness takes the place of strength. Attempts at domination, at first and for a time successful, lead to troubles, resentments, resistance, and disastrous wars. The history of every race or people that bethis inevitable course of development, florescence, and decay. Rome went through it. Germany is at present drinking the bitter draft of it to the dregs.

It would be well for the "Nordics"—whoever they may be—to bear this lesson of history of men and nations in mind and stop their ears to siren voices of glorification and flattery before it is too late. 'The "Nordies' are great. They have done glorious thirties in the past. They are capable of still more wonderful achievements in the future. But they should remember that there are others. Without attempting an accurate classification, under the vague term as used in the literature of its exploitation, it is safe to say that the controlling nations involved in the World War were "Nordic." Are they really proud of it all? Do they feel justified in boasting of the course of its settlements? The "Allies" are with-out doubt chiefly "Nordic," The Turks are anything but that. Yet look at what the outeast, "inferior" Turks have done to their boastful "superiors"!

Isn't it about time to talk and think less about the glory of being "Nordic" and to begin to use a little more

WITH the assurance that the anthracite coal crisis faced during the last weeks of summer in the United

Wages and Coal Prices

States has been safely passed, and that production under the agreed wage basis will continue until a new emergency arises, the disposition of economists and consumers seems to be to analyze somewhat critically the methods employed to induce a truce. The feeling of gratification over the release from a threatened fuel shortage has been somewhat marred by the conviction that the consumer really got the worst of the bargain. Even those who were quick to commend the prompt efforts of Governor Pinchot in establishing a peace basis between the operators and the miners seem now inclined to question the wisdom of his action in the premises. Whereas they once realized that coal at a high price was better than no coal at any price, there is a growing dissatisfaction because coal was not provided in abundance at a lower price than

Of course this dissatisfaction is due in part to what some believe to be the stubborn refusal of the operators and the carriers to absorb the 10 per cent advance in wages granted to the miners, estimated to represent approximately $35,000,000 a year, which must be added to the cost of coal at the mines. It is claimed by the operators that they cannot be expected to absorb even a considerable part of this sum. This view is in direct opposition to that popularly held and insistently urged. Quite convincing briefs are made in support of both contentions. In a statement made recently by Samuel D. Warriner, chief spokesman for the anthracite operators, it was made to appear that whereas the cost of producing 70,000,000 tons of coal in 1913 was $113.-000,000, the cost under the Pinchot agreement would be $325,000,000. Since 1913 there have been frequent advances in the wage scale. The 10 per cent recently added serves to bring the estimated total cost up to the

It is not to be wondered at, considering this tremendous advance in production costs, that the operators hesitated before acceding to the Pinchot proposal, even though it was much more liberal to them than the demands of the miners, made as the basis of the strike order. They realize, quite naturally, that with every dollar added to the selling price of coal they are limiting the consumption of that commodity. They admit that the present high price is economically unsound, and that the tendency unavoidably will be to lessen, rather than increase, their gross profits:

The price undoubtedly is economically unsound. No one realizes this more fully than the consumer, who is compelled, until relief is obtained, to pay the added cost. He does not desire to deny to the miner the equal privileges enjoyed by wage earners in other occupations, but he ponders the fact that the average miner's wage is now $2400 a year, while in the country at large only 8 per cent of the 25.000,000 families receive an equal or higher wage.

DECLINING prices of petroleum, following the marked increase in the yield of the California oil fields, have prompted a movement among the principal oil companies looking to the stabilization of production, either through some form of state or national regulation, or co-operative action by the producers. The American

Petroleum Institute has appointed a special committee, representing various regions of the United States, to consider a plan to place the future drilling of oil wells under a unit system, with public control of issuing drilling permits. The institute is not committed to any specific proposals for limiting or regulating production, but recognizes the desirability of a practical method for avoiding the loss due to the drilling of so many wells by different owners on adjacent properties, and the heavy costs of building storage tanks, loss by evaporation, fires, and other expenses connected with storage of the product. This is not merely a problem for oil producers, since these additional costs must ucts, and therefore are paid by the consuming public. Whether the several state legislatures, or the national Congress, have power to control drilling on private property, is a question as to which there is grave doubt. The State of California requires that a permit be obtained before drilling a well is started, but the conditions under which this permit is granted are so liberal that they are easily complied with. An effort to prohibit drilling, except where deemed necessary by some state or national authority, would promptly result in an appeal to the courts, which would be called upon to decide whether or not an owner of land might not do as he wished with his

as a rule be added to the selling price of petroleum prod-

The suggestion that the owners of oil lands be permitted to combine for the purpose of regulating production would appear to be equally impracticable. The owner of a tract adjacent to producing wells is not likely to agree to refrain from drilling, when he knows that there is a probability of his land being drained dry by the neighboring wells. And the increasing use of oil for fuel, both for steamships and for house-heating purposes, will probably take care of the surplus long before the public could be educated to the point of favoring restrictive legis-

It is scarcely credible that such a move as the systernatic vaccination of the entire population of the Philippine Islands should have been undertaken by the Philippine Board of Health. Yet this is the case, and some almost unbelievable figures are presented in connection with the work. For example, there are ten parties operating in various provinces at present, and the average daily vaccinations of each party number nearly 400. It is estimated that it will take seven years before the task is completed, and that it will cost more than $66,000 annually. As seven years is the outside limit of immunity even supposed to be conferred by vaccination, presumably there has been started a sort of continuous circle, which should prove very profitable to certain interests involved.

By No means the least notable of the recent discoveries of ancient maps is a hitherto unknown Italian world map, dated 1506, a unique copy of which has been secured by purchase for the British Museum. This map, so far as is known, is the first printed map in which the discoveries of Columbus and his contemporaries are set down. In several of the main outlines there is to be found a remarkable general accuracy, which points to the fact that the compiler availed himself of the data supplied by nautical charts. Off the coast of southeast Asia is a legend referring to the achievements of Columbus which shows that his own view that he had reached the extreme shores of Asia was still accepted without question, by some at least, as late as 1506.

On Dublin Quays

DUBLIN, Sept. 11 (Special Correspondence)-It is part Ireland's experience to receive either our blandest patronage and praise or our unmitigated abuse; and half the disputants about Irish character get ammunition for their final volley by arguing the similitude of the French and Irish characters. For etter or for worse, for praise or blame, the Irishman becomes a Frenchman. It is curious how this association persists, even in a matter of mere topography, for one's first thought about the Dublin quays is that one has seen them before. Where? Why, in Paris, of course. In some ways the quays, from the Pont St. Michel to the Pont Neuf, might have been taken secretly by night and dropped hurriedly by the Liffey.

You can buy books off the book-carts—though nowadays I think the Dublin book-cart is suffering from a glut of theology and publishers' remainders. You can get every kind of book from the dusty shops on the quays-hundreds of cheap novels, pocket classics, and obscure and undoubtedly controversial histories of Ireland. The last time I was there I saw a life of Eamon de Valera, and Charlotte Bronte's Letters alone on a shelf, askew, and accumulating the dust of bookshelf acuaintanceships. You won't find those brightly bound George sands, or those paper Victor Hugos, with the third volume of 'Les Miserables' missing—why was it always missing, can you tell me?-there is none of that gentle feeling that one is slipsing back into the glamour of the temps jadis. There is only one Paris. But in Dublin there is a stiffness, a geometrical stiffness, a blankness of expression, a rectangularity, about the quays; that one feels one is walking in the queer perspective of an 1860 woodcut or in an engraving like those which used to attach our fathers and mothers to the Sporting and Dramatic And however long one lingers along Dublin quays and whatever books one finds, one is never taken back into a past elaborated by Renaissance architecture and furnished by Louis Quatorze. In Dublin one gets no farther back than the days of the woodcut, of Irish orators, and Land Acts.

If you haven't the dust of bookish leisure on the Dublin quays, you at any rate have the flying dust of life. Down the South quays to Kingsbridge Station, where the Gork mails go from, the cobbles roar with traffic. A whistle, a clatter, and along come a couple of jarvey cars hurrying to catch the mail, while the incorrigible jarvey keeps his fare at his wits-end with highly colored pleasantries. The Cork Mail brings strange folk to Dublin, but the goods sidings seem to have livelier times. I once made the acquaintance of a strike organizer—and a member of the City Corporation, too, I believe-whose business it was to hold up cattle. One day he received a wire from a country district, reading "Stop pig." He went to the station, undoubtedly suppressing his bewilderment with a sense of public duty, and to his dismay found there were twenty-five pigs. Which was he to stop? I asked him what he did, and his reply was a satire on the dignity of trade union diction: "Sure, I interrogated the pigs."

Coming up the quays again from Kingsbridge, and on the other side of the Liffey, the houses are painted bright green and pink and yellow. There is just the same medley of secondhand shops-sellers of doubtful jewelry, various china, and a miscellany of decrepit cast-off things. One passes the Four Courts, which, though half in ruins, yet have the gray glory of ruined majesty. No longer, does it seem, will their deep colonnades, and dome, bear the long shadows of early morning; though still the sunlight lightens the ruin, and gives new hopes

Farther on one comes upon the furniture shops. Is there anything more wistful, weary, than abandoned furniture? Is there any more pitiful beggar for charity? Is there anything more gaunt, yet grotesque and ridiculous? What is more incongruous than a faded settee in a shop window, or a clock ticking away conscientiously and showing the wrong hour without knowing it—on a pile of old mattresses? It is a subject for the cynic or the philosopher, this cold abandonment of things we have moved among all our lives.

But it is by no means a melancholy subject if you are walking on the quays, because, sooner or later, you are bound to hear the ringing of a bell-as friendly and inviting as a muffin bell. You will come upon a ragged man sitting outside a shop, ringing his bell whenever he feels inclined to, his idea being to attract passers-by to the auction which is going on inside the shop. Only today I was at one of these auctions a hot, dusty affair in an auction room which might have stepped out of the Sporting and Dramatic News of years ago. There was a miscellary of furniture piled up, standing, leaning, equatting and tottering all aroundstatues, and arm chairs in aimless confusion, all the natural communicativeness of furniture chilled out of them, as I thought, by the callousness of man. In a clearing were tiers of seats, arranged in semicircular fashion, and at a fitting distance was a kind of pulpit, in which the unemotional auctioneer and his jaunty clerk were seated. There were at least 100 persons at the auction, stiffened into all kinds of angles by silent watching and gaping. Those who happened to be at all interested in what was being sold merely nodded their bids. The only sounds were the drone of the auctioneer's voice like a bluebottle fly buzzing on a window, and the heavy treading of the warehousemen-very familiar and knowing spirits in white aprons-who brought forward the various lots" with an air of the utmost boredom and superciliousness.

Most extraordinary things happen at these quay auctions, for all the valuable things are knocked down at derisive prices, but there seems no limit to what a Dubliner will pay for worthless odds and ends-odd candlesticks and lamp glasses, for instance-and endless so-called religious pictures. Useful things, it seems, are a nuisance if bought, in spite of the fun there is in buying them. But with little useless things one can always do something or other, and so you advance a shilling, and someone else advances on you, and you go again; and then Paddy Mulligan, say, awakens, and becomes interested, and advances a shilling, which immediately excites two or three ladies in new hats, who join in with gusto. In a few minutes a regular chase has set in. Everyone is bidding, and bidding again, for the sheer joy of the game. It is as exciting as the races in Phoenix Park. And then gradually you rub your eyes and find you have bought a wash basin and two or three gas brackets for thirty shillings. You are so amazed you gape with astonishment. You fix your eyes in wonderment on the unmoved auctioneer. Then your eye catches the next doleful object to be sold, and it is all so entertaining and almost as exciting as a music hall turn, that you sigh and join in the general silence.

Over the river, the other side of O'Connell Bridge, you can hear the auctioneer's bell above the rattling traffic, reminding you of the flying dust of the quays. Who will say the i des Grands Augustins is more romantic than Bachelor's
